of forces in the area. Syria and Egypt, which had been at odds since the second Sinai agreement 14 mooths ago, are moving toward an accommodation. The Syrians and the Palestinians, whose regular armed forces fought a pitched battle a few days ago, are trying to rekindle their "natural alliance."

The conservative Christians of Lebanon are once more threatened with isolation, after six months of a close, though far from natural, alliance with the leftist and nationalist Arah government of President Hafez al-Assad. The threat to the militant Christians is made greater by the fact that they chose to announce an open co-operation with Israel in southern Lebanon at the precise moment when the Arab governments were proclaiming that they were closing ranks.

These occur quickly in the Middla East, Sometimes they last; other times they don't.

It is believed here that Mr. Assad hopes to get around this obstacle by bringing King Hussein back into the picture. NAIROBL Kenya, Oct 22-Few political issues since Kenya's independence have surren me popusar and academic departe-that now surrounds a pending marriage bill, which among other things, would give wrives a veto over a husband's po-lygamous plans, permit wives for share control of family property and send adul-terers to jail for six months.

The bill-one of many recent attempts by African countries to reform and syn-thesize the torthous welter of customs and laws governing family life-cuts deeply into the major question confront-ing all development planning: how can profound cultural patterns that have for centuries defined all human relations be adapted to accommodate the recent and equally profound changes brought by in-dustrialization, urbanization, increased social mobility and newly unleashed indiidualistic aspirations.

African tribal society is by no means nonolithic. There are more cultural, linguistic and even physiological differences among black Africans than there are among white Europeans. But one component of African cultures that is fairly universal is the extended family system which through an intricate blend of rights and responsibilities assured the continu-ance of the family and security for its members. Sex roles were clearly defined. The system tended to be polygamous and was adapted to rural and agricultural settings where people lived in relative isola-

The report supported the view of Administration monitors that wages, al though continuing to outstrip productivity and to push up business costs, have not caused any ecceleration in inflation this year.

The department, reporting on 624 col-lective bargaining settlements covering 2.7 million workers, listed tha following key results:

Wage increases for the first year of new contracts averaged 8.9 percent, as against 10.2 percent for contracts signed in 1975.

The average increase scheduled for the life of the 1976 contracts was 7 percent as against 7.5 percent last year. ¶Contracts had an average duration of 31.3 months, as against 28.9 months for the expiring contracts. Generally, the willingness of uniona to write longer con-tracts is regarded as a sign that union negotietors believe inflation is easing.

In addition, a growing number of con-tracts bad cost-of-living escalator clauses in them, cleuses that are likely to increase raises above the negotiated im-provements. The report said escalator clauses, which call for automatic raises if the Consumer Price Index shows increases nf a specified amount, had been written into 41 settlements covering 233,000 workers, chiefly in rubber and apparel, and had been dropped from five contracts covering 77,000 workers.

As a result, escalator clauses now cover approximately 60 percent of the 10 millinn workers in major bargaining units, the department said. The new contracts with escalator protection provided for

His followers include a 51-year-old woman, her daughter and grandchil-dren, bnt most of them are people about 30 and over. Their story is one of the more interesting illustrations of what hecame of some of the youths who wandered through the sociological swamps that opened up on the fringes of society in the 1960's.

The lives of the group here center on a leased home on the beachfront and a bakery called "Goodies" on a sidestreet. In the middle of it all is the picture of Jim Baker, blown up from a passport photo to a size of 2-by-3 feet. They revere him as a divine father figure.

It was a neighbor who drew a knife on Mr. Baker in an argument about the neigh-bor's dog, Mr. Baker killed him with a blow to the throat. He was freed be-cause he had acted in self defense.

A second killing occurred in Mr. Baker's restaurant days. He had become involved with the wife of another man, who objected and came to Mr. Baker's restaurant with a gun.

Mr. Baker said later that the outraged husband pulled a gim and fired it in the ceiling. They struggled. "We were created by Yahowha as a spiritual family," said Astral, a 29-year-old woman. The daughter of a successful surgeon and a mother who committed suicide, Astral spent a year and a balf at the University of California during the era of youthful revolt in 1966-67.

By the time Yahowha plunged off the cliff in his fatal bing glider crash, she had become his companion and co-leader of the group. She now is the head of the family: have to be The Father.

- "At about that time, children beganto come to him, middle class children, every kind," she said. "The Source be-came the center of everything it wastransition from a world where divorces outnumbered marriages, where it was a dog-eat-dog jungle, where children ran away at 13.

"From there we grew into a true family in spirit," Astral said. "We can't, be separated. Jim Baker became Father Yod, the ultimate father on earth."

Yod, as the young people now called him, moved his flock into a rented manison at Griffith Park. They flour-ished there, and gradually a pattern of patriarchial control began to be ex-ercised by the middle-aged leader. Mary Stave of Los Angeles described

Transcript of the Final Debate Between 2 Presidential Candidate

Following is a transcript of last night's debate between President Ford and Jimmy Carter at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Ya., as recorded by The New York Times through the facilities of ABC News. The moderator was Barbara Walters of ABC News. The questioners were Joseph Kraft, syndicated columnist; Robert C. Maynard of The Washington Post, and Jack Nelson of The Los Angeles: Times.

MODERATOR: Good evening, I'm Barbara Walters, moderator of the last of the debates of 1976 between Gerald R. Ford, the Republican candidate for President, and Jimmy Carter, Democratic candidate for President. Wel-come, President Ford, welcome, Governor Carter, and thank you for joining ns this evening.

This debate takes place before an audience in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on the campus of the College of William and Mary in historic Williamshurg, Va. It is particularly appropriate in this Bicentennial year that we meet on these grounds to hear this debate. "Two hundred years ago, five William and Mary students met at nearby Raleigh Tavern to form Phi Beta Kappa, a fraternity designed, they wrote, "to search ont and dispel tha clouds of falsehood by debating without reserve the issues of the day."

In that spirit of debate, and without reserve, to dispel the clouds of false-hood, gentlemen, let us proceed.

MODERATOR: The subject matter of thia debate is open, covering all issues and topics. Our questioners tonight are Joseph Kraft, syndicated columnist: Robert Maynard, editorial writer for Joseph the Washington Post, and Jack Nelson, Washington bureau chief of the Los Angeles Times

The ground rules tonight are as fol-

Questioners will alternste questions between the candidates. The candidate has up to two-and-a-balf minutes to answer tha question. The other candidate then bas, up to two minutes to respond. If necessary a questioner may ask a follow-up question for further clarification, and in that case the candidate has up to two minutes to respond. As was initially agreed to by both candidetes, the answers should be re-sponsive to the particular questions.

. No Prepared Notes

Finally each candidate bas up to : three minutes for a closing statement. President Ford and Governor Carter do not have prepared notes or comments with them this evening, but they may make notes and refer to them during the debate.

It has been determined that President Ford would take the first question in this last debate, and Mr. Kraft you have that first question for President Ford.

Q: Mr. President, I assume that the Americans all know that these are difficult times and that there's no pie in the sky and that they don't expectsomething for nothing, so I'd like to ask you as a first question as you look ahead in the next four year what sacrifices are you going to call on the American people to make? What price are you going to ask them to pay to realize your objectives? Let me add, Governor Carter, that if you felt that It was appropriate to answer that question in your comments as to what price it would be appropriate for the Ameri--can people to pay for a Carter Adminis-tration. I think that would be proper, 1 too, Mr. President. FORD: Mr. Kraft, I believe that the American people in the next four years noder a Ford Administration will be called upon to make those necessary sacrifices to preserve the peace which. we bave, which means of course that we will have to maintain an adequate military capability, which maans of course that we will have to add, I think, a few billion dollars to our defense appropriations to, make, certain that we bave adequate strategic forces, adequate conventional forces. I think the American people will he called upon to be in the forefront in giving leadership to the solution of those problems that must he solved in the Middle East, in Southern Africa and any problems that might arise in the Pacific. · .

ployment, that we will continue to win the battle against inflation; and at the same time give the kind of quality of life that I believe is possible in Americs. A job, a home for all those that will work and save for it, safety in the streets, health care that is affordable. These things can be done if we have the right vision and the right restraint and the right leadership.

MODERATOR: Governor Carter, your response, please.

CARTER: Well, I might say first of all that I think in the case of a Carter. Administration the sacrifices would be much less.

Mr. Ford's own environmental agency has projected a 10 percent unemploy-ment rate by 1978, if he is President. The American people are ready to make sacrifices if they're part of the process, if they know that they will be helping to make decisions and won't be excluded from being an involved party to the national purpose.

The major effort that we must put forward is to put our people back to. work.

And I think that this is one example. where a lot of people have selfish, grasping ideas now. However, Lremem-ber in 1973 in the depths of the energy crisis, when President Nixon called on the American people to make a sacrifice, to cut down on the waste of gaso-line, to cut down on the speed of automobiles. There was a tremendous surge of patriotism: I want to make a sacri-

I think we could call together-with strong leadership in the White House-business, industry and labor, and say let's have voluntary price restraint; let's lay down some guidelines so we. don't have continuing inflation.

Calls for End to Extremes We can also have an end to the extremes. We now have one extreme, for instance, of some welfare recipients who by taking advantage of the wel-fare laws, the housing laws, the medicaid laws, and the food stamp laws, make over $10,000 a year and they don't have to pay any taxes on it.

At the other extreme, just I percent of the lichest people in our country derive 25 percent of all the tax benefits, sh both of those extremes grasp for advantage and the person who has to pay that expense is the middle in-come family who is still working for a living, and they have to pay for the rich who have privilege and for the poor who are not working. But I think a balanced approach with everybody being part of it and a strivfor unselfishness could help, as it ing did in 1973, to let people sacrifice for their country. I know I'm ready for it; I think the American people are, too

MODERATOR: Mr. Maynard, your question to Governor Carter.

Q. Governor, by all indications, the voters are so turned off by this election campaign so far that only balf intend to vote. One major reason for this apathetic electorate appears to be the low level at which this campaign has been conducted. It has digressed frequently from important issues into allegations of blunder and brainwashing and fixations on lust and Playboy. What re-sponsibility do you accept for the low : level of this campaign for the nation's highest office?

CARTER: I think the major reason aec in particit them and participate in such activities, serving in the Congress of the United States.

Yes, and I'm certain many, many Americans were turned off by the revelations of Watergate-a very, very bad period of time in American political history. Yes, and thousands-maybe millions of Americans were turned off because of the problems that came out of our involvement in Vietnam.

But, on the other hand, I found on July 4th of this year a new spirit born in America. We were celebrating our Biceptenniel and I find that there is a movement as I travel around the country of greater interest in this cam-paign.

Hopes to Stimulate Voters

Now like . any . hardworking . person seeking public office in the campaign, inevitably sometimes you will use rati-er graphic language—and I'm guilty of that just like I think most others in the political arena. But I do make the pledge that in the next 10 days, when we're asking the American people to make one of the most important decisions in their lifetime, because I think this election is one of the most vital in the history of America, that we do, together, what we can to stimulate voter participation.

MODERATOR: Thank you, President Ford. Mr. Nelson, your question to President Ford.

Q. Mr. President, you mentioned Watergate, and you became President because of Watergate. So don't you owe the American people a special obli-gation to explain in detail your role of limiting one of the original investigations of Watergate-that was the one by the House Banking Committee? And I know yon've answered questions on this before—but there are questions that still remain—and I think people want to know what your role was.

Will you name the persons you talked to in connection with that investiga-tion? And since you say you have no recollection of talking to anyone from the White House, would you be willing to open for examination the White House tapes of conversations during that period?

FORD: Mr. Nelson, I testified before two committees, the House and Senate, oo precisely the question that you have asked, and the testimony under oath was to the effect that I did not talk to Mr. Nixon, to Mr. Haldeman, Ehrlichman or to any of the people at the White House, I said I had no recollection whatsoever of talking with any of the White House legislative liaison people.

I indicated under oath that the initiative that I took was at the request of the ranking member of the House Banking and Currency Committee on the Republican side, which was a legitimate request and a proper response by me. Now that was gone into by two Congressional committees and following that investigation both committees overwhelmingly approved me and both the House and the Senata did likewise.

Now, in the meantime, the special prosecutor within the last few days after an investigation himself said there was no reason for him to get involved because he found nothing that would justify it. And then just a day or two ago the Attorney General of the United States made a further inves-tigation and came to precisely the same from these two distinguished gentlemen. . . .

Mr. Harriman talked to the leaders in Yugoslavia, and I think it's accurate to say that there is no prospect, in their opinion, of the Soviet Union invading Yugoslavia should Mr. Tito passaway. The present leadership there is fairly uniform in their purpose. I think it's a close knit group and I think it would be unwise for us to say that we will go to war in Yugoslavia if the Soviets should invade-which I think would be an extremely unlikely thing.

I have maintained from the very beginning of my campaign and this was a standard answer that I made in response to the Yugoslavian ques-tion-that I would never go to war or become militarily involved in the internal affairs of another country unless our own; security was directly, threatened, and I don't believe that our security would be directly threatened: if the Soviet Union went into Yugoslavia. I don't believe it will happen; I certainly hope it won't. I would take the strongest possible measures, short of actual military action there by our own troops. But I doubt that that would be an eventuality

FORD: One quick follow-up question. Did you clear the response you made with Secretary Schlesinger and Gover-nor Harriman?

CARTER: No, I did not.

MODERATOR: President Ford, your response.

FORD: I firmly believe, Mr. Kraft, that it's unwise for a President to sig-nal in advance what options he might exercise if any international problem arose. I think we all recall with some sadness that at tha period of the late 1940's: early 1950's there were some 1940's, early 1950's, there were some indications that the United States would not include South Korea in an Korea. It's a fact they did.

But no President of the United States in my opinion should signal in advance to a prospective enemy what his deci sion might be or what option he might exercise. It's far better for a person sitting in the White House who has a number of options to make certain that the other side so to speak doesn't know precisely what you're going to do

And therefore that was the reason that I would not identify any particular course of action when I responded to a question a week or so ago.

MODERATOR: Mr. Maynard, your question to President Ford, please.

Q: Sir, this question concerns your administrative performance as President. Yet again, General Brown, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff delivered his views on several sensitive subjects among them Great Britain, one of this country's oldest allies. He said, and I quote him now, "Great Britsaid, and I quote non now, threat brit-ain, it's a pathetic thing. It just makes you cry. They're no longer a world power. All they have are generals, ad-mirals and bands." Since General Brown's comments have caused this country embarrassment in the past, why is he still this nation's leading military officer?

A: I have indicated to General Brown that the words that he used in that interview, in that particular case and you would bring into a Carter Adminis-tration people with the necessary background to run the Federal Government?

CARTER: I don't believe it does. I began campaigning 22 months ago. At that time nobody thought I had a chance to win. Very people knew who I was, I came from a tiny town, as you know, Plains, and didn't hold public office, didn't have 'very much money.

And my first organization was just four or five people, plus my wife and my children-my three sons and their wives. And we won the nomination by going out into the street better shops, beauty parlors, restaurants, stores, in factory shift lines, also in armers' markets and livestock sale. barns-and we felt a lot of resistance a while. And we learned from the American people.

And we built up an awareness among the voters of this country, particularly, those in whose primaries I entered 30 of them, nobody's ever done that before -about who I was and what I stood for...

Now we have a very, very wide-ranging group of advisers who have helped-me prepare for these debates and who teach me about international economics and foreign affairs and current matters, health, education, welfare, govern-ment reorganization—I'd say several hundred of them. And they're very fine, and very highly qualified.

Vice Presidential Choice

The one major decision I have made since acquiring the nomination-and I share this with President Ford is the choice of the Vice President, I think this would be indicative of the kind of leaders that I would choose to help me if I am elected.

I chose Senator Walter Mondale. And the only criterion that I ever put forward in my own mind was who among tha several million people in this country would be the best person qualified to be President if something should happen to me, and to join me in being Vice President if I should serve out

My term. And I'm convinced now more than And I was when I got the nomination that Waiter Mondale was the right choice. And I believe this is a good indication of the kind of people I would choose in the future.

Mr. Ford has had that same choice to make. I don't want to say anything. critical of Senator Dole. But I never. heard Mr. Ford say that that was his primary consideration-who was the hest person I could choose in this country to be President of the United States.

"Tighten Their Belts"

The American prople will be called upon to tighten their belts a hit in meeting some of the problems that we face domestically. I don't think that America can go on a hig spending spree with a whole lot of new programs that would add significantly to the Federal budget. I believe that the American people, if given the leadership that I would expect to give, would be willing to give this thrust to preserve the peace and the necessary restraint at home to hold the lid on spending so that we could, I think, bave a long overdo and totally justified tax decrease for the middle income people, and then with the economy that would be generated from a restraint on spending and a tax reduction primarily for the middle-income people, then I think the American people would be willing to make those sacrifices for peace and. prosperity in the next four years.

Q: Could I be a little more specific, Mr. President?

FORD: Sure. ...

Q: Doesn't your policy really imply that we're going to have to have a pretty high rate of unemployment over a fairly long time? That growth is going to he fairly slow? And that we're not going to he able to do very much in the next four or five years to meet the basic agenda of nur national needs in the cities, in health, in tranait and a whole lot of other things like that?

FORD: Not at all. Q: Aren't those the real costs?

Half of Budget for Human Needs

FORD: No, Mr. Kraft. We're spending very significant smounts of money now -some $200 billion a year, almost 50 percent of our total Federal expenditures by the Federal Government at the present time for human needs.

Now, we will probably have to increase that to some extent. But we don't have to bave growth in spending that will blow the lid off and add to the problems of inflation. I believe we can meet the problems within the cities of this country and still give a tax reduction,

I'va proposed, as you know, a reduction to increase the personal from $750 to $1,000. With the fiscal program that I have—and if you look at the projection It shows that we will reduce unem-

we've experienced ever since 1960 has been the deep discouragement of the American people about the perform-ance of public officials. When you've got seven and a half, eight million peo-ple out of work, when you've got three, times as much inflation as you had during the last eight-year Democratic administration, .when you have the highest deficits in history, when you bave it becoming increasingly difficult for a family to put a child through college or to own a home, there's a natural inclination to be turned off."

Feeling of Betrayal

Also, in the aftermath of Bietnam and Cambodia and Watergate and the C.I.A. revelations, people feel-have felt that they've been betrayed by public officials. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1.

I have to admit that in the heat of a campaign-I've been in 30 primaries during the springtime, I've been cam-paigning for 22 months-I've made some mistakes. And I think this is part of just being a human being.

I have to say that my campaign's heen an open one. And the Playboy thing has been of very great concern to me. I don't know how to deal with it exactly. I agreed to give the interview to Playboy. Other people have done it who are notable-Gov. Jerry Brown, Walter Cronkite, Albert Schweitzer, Mr. Ford's own Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Simon, William Buckley, many other people. But they weren't running for President.

And, in retrospect, from hindsight, would not have giveo that interview had I to do it over again. If I should ever decide in the future to discuss my deep Christian beliefs and condemnation and sinfulness I'll use another forum besides Playboy.

Avoidance of Personal Attack

But I can say this: I'm doing the best I can to get away from that. And during the next 10 days the American people will not see the Carter campaign running television advertisements and newspaper advertisements based on a personal attack on President Ford's character.

I believe that the opposite is true with President Ford's campaign. And I hope that we can leave those issues in this next 10 days, about personalities and mistakes of the past-we've both made some mistakes and talk about unemployment, inflation, housing, education, taxation, goveroment organization, chipping away of secrecy, and the things that are crucial to the American people.

I regret the things in my own long campaign thet have been mistaken. But I'm trying to do away with those the last J0 davs

MODERATOR: Thank you, Goveroor Carter. President Ford, your response.

FORD: I believe that the American people have been turned off in this election. Mr. Maynsrd, for a variety of reasons, We have seen on Capitol Hill, in the Congress, a great many allegations of wrongdoing, of alleged im-morality. Those are very disturbing to the American people. They wonder bow an elected representative can serve conclusion.

Now, after all of those investigations by objective, responsible people, I think the matter is closed once and for all. But to add one other feature, I don't control any of the tapes. Those tapes are in the jurisdiction of the court and I have no right to say yes or no. 'A Clean Bill of Health'

But all the committees, the Attorney General, the special prosecutor; all of them have given me a clean hill of bealth. I think the matter is settled once and for all. :

Seeks More Details on Role

Q: Well, Mr. President, if I do sav though, the question is that I think you still have not gone into details about what your role in it was. And I don't think there's any question about whether or not there was a criminal. prosecution hut whether you had told the American people your entire in-volvement in it. And whether you would be willing, even though you don't control the tapes, whether you would be willing to ask that the tapes be released for examination.

FORD: That's for the proper authorities who have control over those tapes to make that decision. I have given every bit of evidence, answered every gestion that's been asked me by any Senator or any member of the House, plus the fact that the Special Prosecutor, on his own initiation, and the Atorney General on his initiation, t highest law enforcement official in this country-all of them have given me a clean hill of health.

And I've told everything I know about it. I think the matter is settled once and for all.

MODERATOR: Goveroor Carter, your response-

CARTER: I don't have any response.

MODERATOR: Thank you. Then we'll have the next question from Mr. Kraft to Goveroor Carter.

Q: Governor Carter, the next big crisis spot in the world may be Yugoslavia. President Tito is old and sick and there are divisions in his country. It's pretty certain that the Russlans are going to do everything they possibly can after Tito dies to force Yugoslavia back into the Soviet camp. But last Saturday yon said, and this is a quote, "I would not go to war in Yugoslavia even if the Soviet Union sent in troops."

Doesn't that statement practically invite the Russians to intervene in Yugoslavia? Doesn't it discourage Yugoslavs who might be tempted to resist, and wouldn't it have been wiser on your part to say nothing and to keep the Russians in the dark, as President Ford did and as I think every President bas done since President Truman.

CARTER: During the last two weeks I've had a chance to talk to two men who have visited the Soviet Union. Yugoslavia and China. One is Governor Averell Harriman, who visited the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia; and the other one is James Schlesinger, whom I think he accompanied to China. I got a complete report back from those countries in several others, were very ill advised. And General Brown has indicated his apology, his regrets and I think that will, in this situation, settle the matter.

It is tragic that the full transcript of that interview was not released and that there were excerpts-some of the excerpts-taken out of context. Not this one, however, that you bring up. General Brown has an exemplar record 'of military performance. He served this nation with great, great skill and courage and bravery for 35 years, and I think it's the consensus of the people who are knowledgeable. in the military field that he 's probably the outstanding military leader and strategist that we have in America today.

Apology and Reprimand

Now he did use ill-advised words, but I think in the fact that he apologized that be was reprimended, does permit him to stay on and continue that kind of leadership that we so badly need as we enter into negotia-tions under the SALT II agreement or if we have operations that might be developing in the Middle East or in Southern Africa or in the Pacific. We need a man with that experience, that knowledge, that know-how and I think, in light of the fact that he has apolo-gized, would not have justified my asking for his resignation.

MODERATOR: Thank you. Governor Carter, your response.

CARTER: Well, just briefly, I think this is the second time that General Brown has made a statement for which he did have to apologize. And I know that everybody makes mistakes.

I think the first one was related to the unwarranted influence of American Jews on the media and the Congress. This one concerns our great burden-I think he said that Israel was a military Q. I'll give you that. But let me go on, because one main subject on the minds of all of them has been the envihurden on us, and that Iran hoped to re-establish the Persian empire. ronment. They're particularly curious about your record. People really want

I'm not sure that I remembered earlier that President Ford had expressed his concern about the statement or apologized for it. This is something, though, that I think, is indicative of a need among the American people to know how the Commander in Chief, the President, feels.

And I think the only criticism that would have of Mr. Ford is that immediately when the statement was revealed perhaps a statement from the President would have been a clarifying and a very beneficial thing.

MODERATOR: Mr. Wilson, your question now to Governor Carter.

Q: Governor, despite the fact that you've been running for President a long time now, many Americans still seem to be uneasy about you. They don't feel that they know you or the people around you, And one problem seems to be that you haven't reached out to bring people of broad background or national experience into your campaign or your Presidentisl plans. Most of the people around you on a day-to-dsy basis are people you bave known in Georgia; many of them are young and relatively inexperienced in national affairs. And doesn't this lead to a serious question as to whather

'Regeneration of Despair'

And that's where there's heen a great regeneration of despair and ill health and a lack of education, lack of purposefulness, and a lack of hope for the future.

But it doesn't take just a cry for bail money or minimum enforcement of the law, it requires an aggressive searching out and reaching out to help people who especially need it. And that's been lacking the last eight years. MODERATOR: Mr. Kraft to Governor Carter.

Q: Mr. Carter, in the nearly 200-year history of the Constitution there have been only 2S ammendments, most of them on issues of the very broadest principles. Now we have proposed ammendments in many highly specialized causes like gun control, school busing, balanced hudgets, school prayer, ahor-tion—things like that. Do you think it's appropriate to the dignity of tha Constitution to tack on asymptotecture Constitution to tack on ammeodments in wholesale fashion, and which of the ones that I list, that is balanced hudgets, school busing, school prayer, abnr-tion, gun control-which of thosa would you really work hard to support if you were President.

CARTER: 1 would not work hard to support any of those. We've always had, I think, a lot of Constitutional amendments proposed. But the passage of them has been fairly slow, and few and far between. In the 200-year history there's been a very cautious npproach to this. Quite often wo have a transient problem. I'm strongly against abortion. It think abortion's wrong. I don't think the Government ought to do anything to encourage abortion. But I don't favor a Constitutional amendment on the subject. But short of a Constitutional amendment, and within the confines of the Suprema Court ruling, I'll do everything I can to minimize the need for abortions with better sex education, family planning, with better doctor procedures, I personally don't believe that the Federal Government ought to finance abortion. But I draw tha line and don't support Constitutional amendment. However, I honor the right of people to seek the Constitutional amendment on school busing, on prayer in the schools and on abortion. But among those you named, I won't actively work for the passage of any of them.

MODERATOR: President Ford, your response, please.

be in jail, and the only way to dn it is to pass strong legislation so that once apprehended, indicted, convicted, they'll be in jail, off thhe streets and not using guns in tha commission of a crime.

OFYIOU SD.

Q: But Mr. President, don't ynn think that the proliferation of the availability of handguns contributes to the possibilof handguns contributes to the possibil-ity of those crimes being committed. And there's a second part to my follow-up, very quickly. There are as ynn know, and as yon've said, jurisdictions around the country with strong gun-control laws. The police officials in those cities contend that if there were a national law to prevent nther juris-dictions from providing the weapone dictions from providing the weapona that then come into places like New York, that they might have a better handle nn the prohlem. Rave you con-aidered that in your analysis of the handgun proliferation problem.

FORD: Yes, I have, and the individuals with whom I've consulted have not convinced me that a national registra-tion of handguns or handgun owners will solve the problem you're talking about. The person who wants to use a gun for an illegal purpose can get it whether it's registered nr outlawed. They will be obtained, and they are the people who ought to go behind hars. You should not in the access hars. You should not in the process penalize the legitimate handgun owner. And when you go through the process of registration, you in effect are penal-izing that individual who uses his gun for a very legitimate purpose.

CARTER: I think it accurate to say that Mr .Ford's position on gun control has changed. Earlier Mr .Levi,hisAttorney General, put forward a gun control proposal which Mr. Ford later, I helieva, espoused. It called for the prohibition against the sale of the so-called Saturday night specials, and would have put very strict control over who owned a handgun.

I have been n hunter all my life and happen to own both shotguns, rifles and a handgun, and the only purpose that I would see in registering handcuns and not long guns of any kind would be to prohibit the ownership of hose guns by those who've used them in tha commission of a crime or who have been proven to be mentally incompetent to own a gun. I believe that limited approach to the question would be advisable and, I think, adequate. But that's as far as I would go with it.

MODERATOR: Mr. Nelson to Goveroor Carter.

Q: Goveroor, you said the Supreme Court today is today, as you put it, moving back in a proper direction in rulings that have limited the rights of criminal defendants, and you've compared the present Supreme Court under Chief Justice Burger very favorably with the more liberal court that wa had under Chief Justice Warren.

So, exactly what are you getting at, and can you elaborate on the kind of court you think this country should have, and can you tell us the kied of qualifications and philosophy you would look for as President in making Supreme Court appointments?

CARTER: While I was Governor of Georgia, although I'm not a lawyer, we had complete reform of the Georgia court system.

own basic political philosophy as best I could determine it. Which would be to continue the progress that has been made under the last two Courts, the Warren Court and the Burger Court.

Would Revise System

1 would also like to completely revise our criminal justice system to do some of the things at the Federal level in court reforms that I've just described as has been done in Georgia and other states.

And then I would like to appoint people who would be interested in help-ing with that. I know that Chief Justice Burger is. He hasn't had help yet from the Administration, from the Congress, to carry this out.

The emphasis, 1 think, of the court system should be to interpret the Con-stitution and the laws equally between property protection and personal protection. So when there's a very narrow decision, which quite often is one that reaches the Supreme Court, I think the choice should be with human rights. And that would he another factor that I would follow.

MODERATOR: President Ford? Stevens Nomination Cited

FORD: 1 think the answer as to the kind of person that I would select is ohvious. I bad one opportunity to nomi-nate an individual to the Supreme Court and I selected the Circuit Court of Appeals judge from Illinois, John Paul Stevens.

1 selected him because of his out-standing record as a Circuit Court of Appeals judga and I was very pleased that an overwhelmingly Democratic United States Secate, after going into his hackground, came to the conclusion that he was fit and should serve, and the vote in his behalf was overwhelm-

So I would say somebody in the format of Justice Stevens would be the kind of an individual that 1 would select in the future, as 1 did him in the past.

1 believe, however, a comment ought to be made about the direction of the Berger Court vis-a-vis tha court that preceded it, it seems to me that the Miranda Case was a case that really mada it very, very difficult for the police, the law enforcement peopla in this country, to do what they could to make certain that the victim of a crime was protected and that those that commit crimes were properly handled and sent to iail.

The Miranda case, the Berger court, is gradually changing, and I'm pleased to see that thera some steps being made hy the Berger court to modify the so-called Miranda decision.

I might make a-correction of what Goveroor Carter said speaking of gun control. Yes it is true, I believe that the sale of Saturday-night specials should be cut out, but ha wants the registration of handguns, MODERATOR: Mr. Kraft, MODERATOR: Mr. Kraft.

Q: Mr. President, the country is now in something that your advisers call an economic pause. I think that to most

President Ford took office. We've got seven and a half million people out of jobs. Since he's been in office two and n half million more American people have lost their jobs. In the last four months alone 500,000 Americans have gona on the unemployment rolls. In the last month we've had a net loss of 123,000 jobs. Anybody who says that the inflation rate is in good shape now ought to talk to the housewives. Ona of the overwhelming results that I've seen in polls is that peopla feel that you can't plan any more. There's no wny to make a prediction that my family might be able to own a home or to put my kids through college. Savings accounts are losing mooey of gaining money. Inflation is robbing

Under the present Administration, Nixon's and Ford's, we've had three times the inflation rate that we experi-enced under President Johnson and President Kennedy. The economic growth is less than half today that it was at the beginning of this year. And housing starts—he compares the hous-ing starts of last year. 1 don't blame him, because in 1975 we had fewer housing starts in this country, fewer homes huilt, than any year since 1940. That's 35 years. And we've got a 35 percent unemployment rate in many areas of this country among construc-tioo workers, And Mr, Ford hasn't dooe anything about It. And I think this shows a callous indifference to the families that have suffered so much. He has vetoed hills passed hy Congress, within the Con-gressional hudget guidelines, joh opporunities for two million Americans. We'll never have a balanced hudget, we'll never meet the needs of our people, we'll never control the inflationary style as loog as we have seven and a half or eight million people out of work, who are looking for jobs. And we've probably got two and a half milfor jobs anymore, because they've given up hope. That is a very serious indictment of this Administration. It's probably tha pause for a month or two was healthy, because we could not have honestly sustained n 9.2 percent rate of growth

'We're Ahead of West Europe'

Now I'd like to point out as well that the United States economic recov-of any major free industrial nation in the world today. We're ahead of all of the Western European countries.

The United States is leading the free world nut of the recession that was going to see unemployment going down, more jobs available and the rate of inflation going down. And I think this is a record that the American peo-ple understand and will appreciate.

FORD: I think the increase in the prospects as far as I'm concerned, and the less favorabla prospects for Gover-nor Carter, reflect that Governor Carter is inconsistent in many of the positions that he takes. He tends to distort on a number of occasions.

Challenges Comments on Jobs

Just a moment ago, for example, he was indicating that in the 1950'a, for example, unemployment was very low. He fails to point out that in the 1950'a we were engaged in the war in Vietnam —I mean in Korea. We had 3.5 million young men in tha Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines. That's not the way to end unemployment or to reduce unemployment.

At the present time we're at peace. We have reduced the number of people in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Ma-rines from 3.5 million to 2.1 million. We are not at war, we have reduced the military manpower by a million, four hundred thousand. If we had that many more people in the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and Marines, our unemployment figure would be considerably lower.

But this Administration doesn't believe the wey to reduce unemployment is to go to war, or to increase the num-ber of people in the military, so you cannot compare unemployment — as you sought to—with the present time with the 1950's, because the then-Ad-ministration had people in the military, they were at war, they were fighting overseas and this Administration has reduced the size of the military by a : 1,400,000. They're in the civilian labor market and they're not fighting any-where around the world today.

MODERATOR: Thank you, gentlemen. This will complete our questioning for this debate. We don't have time for more questions and full answers, so now each candidate will be allowed up to four minutes for a closing statement. And at the original coin toss in Philadelphia a month ago, it was determined that President Ford would make . the first closing statement tonight. > President Ford.

FORD: For 25 years, I served in the Congress under five Presidents, I saw them work. I saw them make very hard decisions. 1 didn't always agree with their decisions, whether they were ' Democratic or Republican Presidents. ?

For the last two years I've been the President, And 1 have found from experience that it's much more difficult to make those decisions than it is to second-guess them.

I became President at a time that the United States was in a very troubled time. Wo had an inflation of over 12 percent. We were on the hrink of the worst recession in the last 40 years. Wa were still deeply involved in the problems of Vietnam.

The American people had lost faith and trust and confidence in the Presidency itself.

FORD: I support the Republican platform which calls for the constitutional amendment that would outlaw abortion. I favor the particular constitutional amendment that would turn over to the states the individual right of the voters in those states the chance to make a decision by public referen-dum. I call that the "people's amendment." I think if you really helleva that the people of a state ought to make a decision on a mattar of this kind that we ought to havo a Federal constitutional amendment that would permit each one of the 50 states to make the choice. I think this is a responsible and a proper way to proceed. 1 helieve also that there is some merit to an amendmont that Senator Everett Dirksen proposed very frequently, an amendment that would change the Court decision as far as voluntary prayer in public schools. It seems to me that there should be an opportunity as loog as it's voluntary, as long as there is no compulsion whatsoever, that an individual ought to have that right.

Matters of Deep Conviction

So in those two cases I think such a constitutional amendment would be proper, and 1 really don't think in either case they are trivial matters. 1 think they're matters of very deep conviction as far as many, many people in this country believe. And therefore they shouldn't be treated lightly, that they'ra matters that are important and in those two cases 1 would favor them.

MODERATOR: Mr. Maynard to President Ford.

Q: Twice you have been the intended victim of would-be assassing using handguns, yet you remain a steadfast opponent of substantive handgun con-trol. There are now some 40 million handguns in this country going up at the rate of 2.5 million a year and, tragically, those handguns are secretly purchased for self-protection and wind up being used against a relative or friend. In light of that, why do you remain so adamant in your opposition to sub-atantivo gun control in this countryu

FORD: Mr. Maynard, the record of gun control, whether it's in one city or enother or in some state, does not show that the registration of a gun. handgun, or the registration of the gun owner, has in any way whatsoever de-creased the crime rate or the use of that gun in the communiting of a crime. The record just doesn't prove that such legislation or action by a local city council is effective. What we have to do, and this is the crux of the matter, is to make it very, very difficult for a person who uses a gun in the commission of a crime to stay out of jail. If we make that use of a gun in the commission of a e a serious and criminal offense and that person is prosecuted, then in my opinion we are going after the per-122500.

'Go After tha Criminal'

I doa't believa in the registration of handgins or the registration of the handgun owner. That has not proven to be effective, and therefore I think a better way is to go after the criminal, the individual who commits a crime in the possession of a gun and uses that gun for a part of his criminal activity.

Those are the people who ought to

and a started

We streamlined the structure of the courts, put in administrative officers, put a unified court system in, required that all severe sentences be reviewed for uniformity, and in addition to that put forward a proposal that was adopted and used throughout my own term of office, the selection of all judges and district attorneys—prosecuting attoroeys-on the basis of merit.

Panel Made Recommendations

Every time I had a vacancy on the Georgia Supreme Court, and I filled five of those vacancies out of seven, total, and about half the Court of Appeals judges, about 35 percent of the trial judges, I was given from an objec-tive panel the five most highly qualified persona in Georgia.

And from those five I always chose the first or second ooe, So merit selection of judges is the most important single criterion. And I would institute the same kind of procedure as Presi-dent, not only in judicial appointments but also in diplomatic appointments. Secondly, I think that the Burger

Court has fairly well confirmed the majnr and most far-reaching and most controversial decisions of tha Warren Court: Civil rights has been confirmed hy the Burger Court, it hasn't been reversed and I don't think there's any inclination to reverse those basic deci-

Tha one man-one vote rule, which is a very important one that struck down the unwarranted influence in the legislature of sparsely populated areas of the states. The right of indigent or very poor accused persons to legal counsel. I think the Burger Court has confirmed that basic and very controversial decision of the Warren Court. Also the protection for an arrested person against onwarranted persecution in trying to get a false confession.

Questions Some Rulings

Butnow I think there have been a couple of instances where the Burger Court has made technical rulings where an obviously guilty person was later found to be guilty. And I think that in that case some of the more liberal members of the so-called Warren Court agreed with those decisions. But the only thing that I have pointed out was, that I've just said, that there was n need to clarify tha technicalities so that you couldn't be forced to release a person who is obviously guilty just because of a small technicality in the law. And that's a reversal of position by the Burger Court with which I do agree.

Q. Governor, I don't believe you answered my question, though, about the kinds of people you would be looking for for the Court, the type of philosophy you would be looking for, if you were making appointments to the Sn-preme Court as President.

CARTER: O.K 1 thought I answered it by saying it would be on a basis of merit. Once the search and analysis procedure had been completed, and once I'm given a list of the five or seven or 10 best qualified persons in the country, 1 would make a selection from among those persons. If the list was in my opinion, fairly uniform, if there was no outstanding person, then I would undoubtedly choose someone who would most accurately reflect my Americans that sounds like a antiseptic term for low growth, unemployment, standstill at a high level of derline in take-home pay, lower factory earnings, more layoffs. Isn't that really a rotten record, and doesn't your Administra-tion bear most of the blame for it?

FORD:Well, Mr. Kraft, 1 violently disagree with your assessment. And 1 don't think think the record justifies the conclusion that you come to. Let me taik about the economic announcements that were made just this past week.

Yes, it was announced that the G.N.P. real growth in the third quarter was at 4 percent. But do you realize that over the last 10 years that's a higher figure than the average growth during that 10-year period. Now, it's lower than the 9.2 percent growth in the first quarter and it's lower than the 5 percent growth in the second quarter, But every economist-liberal, conservative every -that I'm familiar with recognizes that in the fourth quarter of this year and in the fifth quar-the first quarter of next year-that we'll have an increase in real G.N.P.

Now for the Pluses

But now let's talk about the phases that cama out this week. Wo had an 15 percent increase in housing starts. We had a substantial increase in new permits for housing. As a matter of fact, based on the announcement this week, there will be at an annual rate a million eight hundred and some thou-sand new houses built, which is a ndous increase over last year and a aubstantial increase over the earlier part of this year.

Now in addition, we had a very --soma evry good news in the reduction in the rate of inflation-and inflation hits everybody-those who are work-ing and those who are on welfare. The rate of inflation es announced just the other day is under 5 percent and the 4.4 percent that was indicated at the time of the 4 percent G.N.P. was less than the 5.4 percent-it means that the American huyer is getting a better bargain today because inflation is less.

Q: Mr. President, let me ask you this, There has been an increase in layoffs, and that is something that bothers everybody in the country, even people that have a job are afraid they're going to be fired.

Did you predict that increase in lay-offs. Didn't that take you by surprise? Hasn't your Administration been surprised by this pause? In fact, haven't you been so obsessed with saving money that you didn't even push the Government to spend funds that were allocated?

FORD: Well Mr. Kraft, 1 think the record can be put in this way, which is the way that 1 think satisfies most Americans:

Since the depths of the recession, we have added four million jobs. Most importantiy, consumer confidence as surveyed by the reputable organization at the University of Michigan is at the highest since 1972.

In other words there is a growing public confidence in the strength of this economy and that means that there will be more industrial activity. It means that there will be a reduction in the unemployment. It means that there will be increased hires. It means that there will be increased employment. Now we've had this pause, but most economists, regardless of their political philosophy, indicate that this worst one of all.

Q: Goveroor Carter, you entered this race against President Ford with a 20 point lead or better in the polls. And now it nppears that this campaign is headed for a photo finish. You said how difficult it is to run against a sitting President, but Mr. Ford was just as much an incumbent in July when you were 20 points ahead as he is now. Can you tell us what caused the evaporation of that lead in your opinionb0

CARTER: Weil, that's not exactly an ccurate description of what happened. When I was that far ahead it was immediately following the Democratic convention and before the Republican convention

At that time, 25 or 30 percent of the Reagan supporters said that they would not support President Ford. But as occurred at the end of the Democratic convention, the Republican Party unified itself. And I think immediately following the Republican convention there was about a 10-point spread. 1 believe that, to be accurate, 1 had 49 percent and President Ford had 39 percent.

Waiting for Election Day

The polls are good indications of fluctuations, but they vary widely one from another. And the only poll I've ever followed is the one that is, you know, taken on election day. I was in 30 primaries in the spring and at first it was obvious that I didn't have any standing in the polls. As a matter of fact, I think when Gallup ran their first poll in December of 1975 they didn't put my name on the list. They had 35 people on the list; my name wasn't even there. And at the beginning of the year 1 had about 2 percent.

So the polla to me are interesting, but they don't determine my hopes or my despair. I campaign among people, I'va never depended on powerful political figures to put me in office. I have a direct relationship with hundreds of thousands of people around the country who actively campaign for me. In Georgia alone, for instance, I got 84 percent of the vote. And 1 think there were 14 people in addition to myself on the ballot. And Governor Wallace had been very strong in Geor-gia. That's an overwhelming support from my own people who know me best.

Can't Explain Fluctuations

And today we have about 500 Georgians, at their own expense, just working people who believe in me, spread around the country involved in the po-litical campaign. So the polls are interesting, but I don't know how to explain the fluctuations. I think a lot of it depends on current events, sometimes oreign affairs, sometimes domestic af-

But I think our hold, our support amoog those who are crucial to the alection, has been fairly steady. And my success in the primary season was, I think, notable for n newcomer, for someone who's outside Washington, who never has been a part of the Washington establishment. And I think that we'll have good results, not only for myself, but I hope for the country,

FORD: 1 think most people know that, 1 did not seek the Presidency, but I am asking for your help and assistance to be President for the next four years. During this campaign we've seen a lot of television shows, a lot of humper stickers and a great many sloganso f one kind or another. But those are not the things that count. What counts is that the United States celebrated its 200th birthday on July 4. As a result of that wonderful experience all over the United States there is a new spirit in America. The American people are healed, are working together. The American people are moving again, and moving in the right direction. We have cut inflation by better than half. We have come out of the recession and we're well oo the road to real prosperity again. There has been a restonation of faith and confidence and trust in the Presidency, because I've been open, candid and forthright. I have never promised more than I could produce and I have produced could produce, and I have produced everything that I promised.

We are at peace-not a single young American is fighting or dying on any foreign soil tonight. Wa have peace edom, with fr

I've been proud to be Presidento f the United States during these troubled time. 1 love America just as all of you love America. It would be the highest honor for me to have your support on Nov. 2 and for you to say, Jerry Ford, you've done n good job. Keep on doing

Thank you, and good night.

MODERATOR: Thank you President Ford. Governor Carter.

CARTER: The major purpose of an election for President is to choose a leader, someone who can analyze the depth of feeling in our country, to set a standard for our people to follow, to inspire people to reach for greatness, to correct our defects, to answer difficult questions, to bind ourselves to-gether in a spirit of unity.

I don't believe the present Adminis-tration has done that. We have been discouraged and we've been alienated, sometimes we've been embarrassed, sometimes we've been ashamed that people are out of work and there's n sense of withdrawal. But our country is innately very strong. Mr. Ford is a good and decent man, but he's been in office now more than 500 days, approaching atmost as long as John Kennedy was in office. I'd like to ask the American people what's been accomplished. A lot remains to be done.

We serve like 15th among all the nations of the world in infant mortality and our cancer rate is higher than any country in the world. We don't have good health care. We could have it. Employment ought to be restored to os people. We've become almost a welfare state.

We spend now 700 percent more on unemployment compensation than we did eight years ago when the Republi-cans took over the White House. Our people want to go back to work.

Our education system can he improved. -

Secrecy ought to be stripped away from government, and a maximum of persooal privacy ought to be maintained. Our housing programs have gone bad. It used to be that the average family could own a house, but oow less than a third of our people can afford to buy their own bomes.

The budget was more grossly out of balance last year than ever before in the history of our country-$65 billion, primarily because our people are not at work.

Inflation Is Robbing Us'

Inflation is robbing us, as we have already discussed, and the Government hureaucracy is just a horribly mess. This doesn't have to be.

I don't know all the answers-no-body could-but I do know that if the President of the United States and the Congress of the United States and the people of the United States said, "I believe our nation is greater than what we are now," I believe that if we are inspired, if we can achieve a degree of unity, if we can set our goals high enough and work toward recognized goals, with industry and labor and agriculture along with government at all levels, that we can achieve great things. We might have to dp it slowly. There are oo magic answers to it, but I believe together we can make great progress. We can correct our difficult mistakes and answer those very tough questions.

I believe in the greatness of our country, and I believe the American people are ready for a change in Washington. We've been drifting too long. We've been dormant 'too long. We've been discouraged too long, and we have not set an example to our own people, But I believe that we can now establish in the White House a good relationship with Congress, a good relationship with our people, set very high goals for our country, and with inspiration and hard work we can achieve great things and let the world know-that's very important-hut more importantly let the people in onr own country real-ize, that we still live in the greatest nation on earth. Thank you very much

This concludes the 1976 Presidential debates, a truly remarkable exercise in democracy. For this is the first time in 16 years that the Presidential candidates have debated. It is the first time ever that an incumbent President has debated his challenger. And the debate included the first between the two Vice Presidential candidates,

Italian-American Disenchantment With Candidates Bodes Ill for Carter and Democrats in Connecticut

WATERBURY, Conn. Oct. 21-If aoybody should be voting Democratic this year, it's Amato Mongelluzzo-

Steve to friends. The brass factory where he works es e diesel mechanic, and where his immigrant father toiled for 50 years. will soon be shut down. He complains about the economy, taxes, prices and a Government in Washington that has "just forgot about us here."

Yet Steve Mongelluzzo says he is so disanchaoted with both President Ford and Jimmy Carter that he proba-bly won't vote this year for the first time in his life.

Why not Mr. Carter? "He's a Southerner-he doesn't know aoything about manufacturing." And Mr. Ford? "He says the economy is good-why doesn't he come here where the economy is bad?"

Unconcern Is Widespread

Mr. Mopgelluzzo's diffidence, widely shared lo this depressed old New England factory town-over half Italian-American and heavily Democraticf-does not augur well for the Democrats.

The latest survey by The New York Times and CBS News found that, while the Poles, Irish and other ethnic groups were shifting back firmly into the Democratic column, the Italians-the largest foreign minority in the United States-remained closely divided. Even if they go Democratic in the final out-come, the margin may be much smaller than usual. . . .

found Italian-Americans were markedly more conservative than other ethnic groups on a broad range of social issues. And, tellingly, they were much less likely to say Jimmy Carter cared about people like them.

Times are not good in Town Plot. One by one, the Anaconda, Scovill and Kennecott plants have closed, leaving Waterbury a ghost of its former self and putting a tax squeeze on hard-working homeowners like Louis Ponzillo of America Street, a firefighter for 26 years.

He moonlighted for years to send his children to college to give them "a better chance in life," and he sees no rest in sight. He longs for a change, but Mr. Carter fails to inspire him.

"He doesn't move me," said Mr. Ponre doesn't move me, said Mr. Pon-zillo, adding. "If he gets in, we may have another war." But be finds Mr. Ford equally unappealing because he would not help "average middle-class people" and because "he let Nixon go free."

How would be vote today? Mr. Ponzillo stared hard at the living room carpet and sbook bls bead. "It's tough," he said finally. "I suppose it's my duty to vote but I don't think either ooe is capable."

Across America Street, Katherine Palladino, the gregarious wife of a me-chanic who calls herself "strictly a httle lady at home" and "an American through and through," was clearly leaning to Mr. Ford. "You have to give that man a lot of credit-let him run it," she said, indignant over Mr. Carter's attacks. Still, she felt the campaign was ignoring issues that affected her. "They're too busy arguing about General Brown and Earl Butz," she said. "They are not on our level." While she liked Mr. Ford, she found Betty Ford's openness too "undignified" for a First Lady. And as for the President's son Jack, who has admitted smoking mari-juana, "Give bim a good swat." Some say Jimmy Carter, with his Southern manner and Baptist religion, grates on Italian Catholic sensibilities. Few here put it that way, but it is clear the distance between Plains, Ge., and Waterbury is measured in more than miles.

lores J. Devito, e Democrat, trying to explain shy she was still undecided. The overwhelming sentiment in Town Plot is distrust aod cyoicism. "To tell you the truth, I haven't been listening -they make these promises and they don't deliver," sald Lena Divito, an unemployed saleswoman, as a neighbor, Merisa Longo, oodded in agreement. This is not to say that Jimmy Carter has no support here. Salvatore Lombar-do, a retired tool setter who was interrupted as he teoded his endive patch, approved of the Georgian as a "poor men's man." So did his next-door neighbor. Romeo Caputo, a factory worker who was found making red wine in his basement. And down the block Salvatora Addessio, a printer and a staugch Democrat since the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, felt that 'we could use a change."

But the Carter streogth is so shallow that local pundits like Thomas McLar-ney, the Democretic registrar of voters, doubts the candidate's margin will ex-ceed 5,000 votes—in a town where the Democrats usually win by 15,000.

Indeed, all signs indicate that essunilated Italians no looger vote as an eth-nic bloc. Representative Ronald A. Sarasin, a Republican, is the clear favorite in Town Plot, even though bis Democratic opponent, Mika Adaoti, is an Italian.

And this could spell trouble for Mr. Carter in populous states like Connecticut, New York, New Jersey. Illinois and California, where Democrats count oo ethnic votes to offset Republican areas.

Many Democratic politicians are openly pessimistic about Connecticut this year, especially its heavy Italian-American vote. So much so that the state's leading Italian politicians gath-ered this week to discuss the problem at the Governor's mansion, occupied by an Italian, Ella T. Grasso.

From interviews with dozens of Italian-Americans in Waterbury and Hartford, it was clear there was no one Italian vote: Neighborboods like Hartford's South End, where there are many new immigrants and where union loyalty and the Democratic machine are still powerful forces, seem solidly for Mr. Carter. But the story is different io the larger and more affluent communi-ties of second and third-generation Italians, where old party bes are weak and the mood more conservative.

Reaction in Typical Community

And there is probably no more typical such community then the Town Plot section of Waterbury, overlooking the section of Waterbury, overlooking the low, grimy brass and copper factories along the Naugatuck River. Its jobs et-tracted the residents' parents from the old country a generatinn ago. The voc-ing list elmost sings of Italy—Santalu-cia, Bacchiocchi, Carlssimi, Picarelli, Cappeletti, Iacoviello.

One hears few old-world accents any more in Town Plot, But beneath the American exterior is a warmth and gre-gariousness that is as Italian as a Verdi garrousness that is as itanan as a vertil opera. It is the kind of place where two or three generations still live in the same house, where Angelo Testa's neighbors on Wilkenda Avenue weptwhen be recently decided to move after 25 years in the same house, and where a stranger asking nosey questions was not turned away and more than once was invited in for an Italian meal.

TROY BEGINS SERVING 60-DAY PRISON TERM

City Councilman, Sentenced for Tax Violation, Reports to Federal Courthouse in Brooklyn

A somber Matthew J. Troy Jr. walked nto the Federal Courthouse in Brooklyn resterday to start serving a 50-day jail erm for a tax violation.

The City Councilman, former leader of he Queens Democratic organization, acked his usual ebullience as he strode arough a crowd of reporters and phoographers jamming the sidewalk in front f the white granite court building. "How do you feel on a day like today, fatt?" a reporter asked. "Not too good-not too good Except, m prepared. All my life I've been a man nd I'm going to be a man to the day die."

"I bave to take the punishment," be dded, "and I'm ready to accept it."

The punishment was handed down by District Judge George C. Pratt on Sept. 9, when Mr. Troy received his jail sen-fence for not reporting on his 1972 in-come-tax return $37,000 be bad taken from the estates of his law clients.

Place of Confinement

The 60 days, it was disclosed yesterday rould probably be spent in the Metropoli-an Correctional Center at 150 Bark Row, Just a few hundred yards from Mr. Troy's esk in City Hall.

Warden Larry Taylor said the Council-nan would be assigned to guarters in the minimum-security area on the fifth oor and would be assigned a job "unless population crunch builds up." He did

The strongest supporter of the wall is Robert O'Hara, the city architect who designed it.

Mr. O'Hara said he had designed the wall to "define the square" and to keep the sight and sounds of traffic outside. The wall would encourage people to. "come inside and see" what no longer would be visible from outside, he said. Patios and planters for greenery were included in the design.

"I stand by my design-my reputa-tion is on the line," Mr. O'Hara said during the beight of the controversy. "The new design really is very exciting, and I think it will stand the test of time. Wait until it's finished. I think people will be pleased."

The city and Federal governments had appropriated $575,000 for the project, which included shoring up the shaky foundation of the monument, remarring its ornamental fountains and improving the sidewalks, in addition to building the wall. Rutgers Making Meadowlands Debut Green Cards 68

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.

Many residents of East Rutherford, N.J. have a couple of free tickets for the first college football game to be played at Giants Stadium in the Meadowiands. But those who live elsewhere will have to pay from $3 to $6 for the right to sit in on the Rutgers-Columbia game there today.

In an effort to appease East Rutherford citizens, the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority malled two free tickets to the 2,800 homes in the community. Many citizens bad been demanding an increase in compensation from the Authority for the 750 acres of East Rutherford Meadowlands property that was taken for Giants Stadium, the trotting track and other facilities of the new sports complex.

The free tickets were accompanied by a form letter of welcome from David A. (Sonny) Werblin, the chairman of the Authority. Asked if East Rutherford resideots, who have staged protests at the stadium before, were expected to picket before and during the game today, one official of the Authority said: "No. But maybe they'll have a ticket burning."

A number of East Rutherford residents undoubtedly will go to the game, where they will be among quite a few other persons who have already paid for tickets. The Authority announced yesterday an advance sale of more than 25,000 tickets.

The game itself, starting at 1 P.M., will feature a team in Rutgers that is undefeated and untied this season and holds the longest current major-college winning streak-13 games over the last two years. Columbia, which bas won two of five games, will be the home team because the contest was originally scheduled for Baker Field in New York City before being transferred to the Meadowlands. Proceeds will go to the New Jersey Lions Club Sight Foundation.

Rutgers, the New Jersey state university, is involved in a program to upgrade its football image, a program that could be enhanced by a victory over its opponent from the Ivy League at the newest big stadium in the nation. The Rutgers push has been apparent for some time and was made more obvious when it was learned yesterday that the school was negotiating to play Penn State in the opening game of the 1979 season.

For that game to take place, Rutgers will have to get out of a commitment to play Colgate on Sept. 15, 1979, and Penn State must be excused from a commitment to play at Duke that day.

But Colgate and Duke officials said vesterday they were willing to make the adjustment to accomodate Rutgers and Penn State. Thus, with a 13-game winning streak, a big game today in the Meadlowlands and prestigious Penn State as a future opponent, it is onward for Rutgers football. At least, it is planned that way.

Columbia's Chances Slim

Columbia's chances today appear slim because of the Rutgers defense, statistically the best in the land. Led by Nate Toran, Jim Hughes and John Alexander, among others, Coach Frank Burns's defensive unit bas given up an average of just 178.5 yards a game.

While Rutgers hopes to move closer to a big spotlight, Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh will be in that spotlight. The senior tailback will be attempting to set a career rushing record for a major-college player when the undefeated Pitt team plays Navy at Annapolis, Md. Dorsett, who bas gained 5,026 yards, needs 152 yards to break Archie Griffin's four-year mark of 5,177 yards.

ABC, which will televise the Mis-souri-Nebraska game as its college game of the week, will break into that Big Eight contest to give occassional live coverage to Dorsett's drive for a record

Actually, Howard Stevens rushed for more yardage than anyone else in col-lege football with a four-season total of 5,297. But he is not recognized as holding either the small- or major-college record because he played the 1968 and '69 seasons at Randolph-Macon, which is rated small college, and the 1971 and '72 seasons at Louisville, a major college. He rushed well over 2,000 yards at each. Dorsett could eclipse even Stevens's total before the eod of his college career. He has five games remaining, including today's.

For 136 and Lead In Southern Golf

COLUMBUS, Ga., Oct. 22 (AP)-Hubert Green chipped in twice for birdies on his way to a 68 that enabled him to establish a one-stroke lead today after the second round of the $125,000 Southern open golf tournament

'There's some skill, of course, but any time you chip in there's an awful lot of luck involved," Green said after having posted his 36-hole total of 136, four under par on the hilly, 6,791-yard course of Green Island Country Club. "I'd really like to win it again," said

Green, already the holder of three 1976 tour titles, "but there's too much golf left to be played to make any predictions."

He paused, smiled and added: "But it does look like my record is safe."

He won this tournament last year with a course-record 16 under par. The slick, extremely fast greens have all but eliminated the possibility that anyone will even come close this year. Only five men bave been able to break par for the first 36 holes.

"Putting these greens," said Jerry McGee, just two shots off the lead, "is scarier than watching 'Jaws.' " After two full rounds, Mac McLendon was the only player in the 156-man field able to get in 18 holes without a bogey. He reeled off 17 pars and a birdie today for a 69 that left him at 137, one shot back of Green.

Jim Colbert, the first-round leader, hit out of bounds for a double bogey and had to work hard for a 71 that Jeft him tied with McGee at 138. McGee shot a 68 today.

Spurs Beat Philadelphia In Opener, 121-118

Special to The New York Times PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22-Let it everywhere be recorded that the time was 8:04 tonight when the Spectrum went dark in anticipation of the dawn of a new era in Philadelphia basketball. The only lights were on the overbead message board, and they spelled out "Is There a Doctor in the House?'

As the crowd started to yell, Dave Zinkoff, the veteran public-address man for the 76ers, started the announcement that all those in attendance had come to hear:

"From Massachusetts," Zinkoff began, already in the upper register of his range, "Number six, Julius Erving." Applause for Two Minutes

There was no way of telling exactly how Zinkoff had pronounced the name, because his voice had been drowned by a tidal wave of cheers cascading toward the solitary figure bathed in the spotlight on the floor. The 17,196 fans stood for Julius Erving and clapped for Julius Erving for two full minutes. At one point, a fan presented him a doctor's bag. And when he waved it at the people they clapped

Yanks Are Haunted By a Big Red Sweep

Cincinnati Welcome Loss in Series Ends Quieter Than in'75

CINCINNATI, Oct. 22 (AP)-The scene was the same as last year's. The crowd was about the same size and they were cheering for the same heroes.

But what a difference a year made today when Cincinnati welcomed home its world champions for the second straight time.

Some Reds players noted that part of the excitement was missing or had taken a new form after their four-game World Series sweep of the New York Yankees.

This year's crowd is different-like us," said Manager Sparky Anderson, "They're more professional than evar before. I'm more thrilled this year than I was last year, but we've learned to express ourselves and it stays inside."

The 35,000 welcoming fans were more subdued than last year when the Reds' celebrated the dramatic seventhgame victory over the Boston Red Sox and won their first World Series since 1940.

"That first time is always the most exciting and I'll always remember it," "but the second time is just as impor-tant, just as a third will be. But I'll always remember the excitement of those seven games."

Response Quieter

The crowd filled Fountain Squarethe traditional gathering spot for cele-brations-and cheered the players as each made his appearance and said a few words. Confetti fell from the taller buildings as the Reds players and man-agement were paraded around the city in cars.

A few players drifted into the clubhouse at Yankee Stadium and drifted back out. A few left for home, Some stayed at their baseball homes, sleeping off the events of the previous six days that, at least for the moment, turned the fulfillment of their collective dream bit a nightmare. Dick Tidrow was one of the players who visited the Stadium briefly. As he carried his Yankee equipment hag out of the clubhouse yesterday, he paused for a moment to reflect on the fourgame World Series sweep the Yankees had suffered at the hands of the de-fending champion Cincinnati Reds.

"I think we had our World Series in the playoffs," said Tidrow, the good relief pitcher who gave up the second of Jchnny Bench's two home runs in the 7-2 fourth-game loss Thursday night. "They already had been through that a few times and they had their World Series in the World Series. We were gunning to get there. They were gunning to win it."

Losing Is the Worst Thing

Billy Martin, the emotionally wrought manager, was not at the 5tadium. He had admittedly experienced a "rough night" without getting too much sleep and he was taking it easy at the Shera-ton Heights Hotel in Hasbrouck Heights, N.J., his summer home,

Martin agreed with Tidrow's assessment of the Yankees' problem in the Series and added a few observations of his own. He spoke softly, his voice still hoarse from all the yelling he did at the umpires during the fourth game (he was eventually ejected) and from the effect the loss had on the man who considers losing a personal insult, "Everybody says we had a great year," Martin said, sitting at a table in the hotel's darkened Sports Bar. "But heck, we lost four straight, Being thrown out of the World Series isn't the worst thing in the world. The worst thing is losing. It isn't something you turn off right away. Now that the Cincinnati Reds have won the World Saries again, they want to be the first National League team to win it three consecutive years. But first, they must win the National League West next season and that's where Tom Lasorda might create a challenge, with his spirit as well as with his team. Tom Lasorda is the new manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, succeeding Walter Alston, and Tom Lasorda is as combative as Walter Alston was calm. "Things," says Peter O'Malley, the Dodger president, "are going to be different around bere." And if 49-year-old Tom Lasorda, once a lefthanded pitcher and Alston's noisy thirdbase coach the last four seasons, instills his aggressiveness into the Dodgers, the Reds will know they're in a race. In his seven years of managing In tha Dodger farm system, his teams won five pennants. But his reputation as a battler preceded him in 1966 when he was assigned to take over the Dodgers' club at Ogden, Utah.

"Remember," cautioned Buzzy Bavaai, then a Dodger vice president, "no fights now." "Who me?" Tom Lasorda answered in all humility and propriety. "Me fight? No way."

But We Won the Pennani'

In the first inning of his first game, Tom Lasorda was coaching at third base when he picked up a foul ball and tossed it ont of play.

"What'd you do that for?" the opposing manager yelled. "The ball was dirty, that's why." Lasorda yelled back. "One word led to another," Tom Lasorda recalls now.

"and now the other manager comes out on the field toward "and now the other manager comes out on the field toward me. He was a real big guy and the closer be got, the bigger he got. When he got close enough, I hit him a left band and now their whole team is coming out of the dugout. We had a dandy. The next day Bizzy phoned the first thing in the morning—the first inning of my first game and I'm in a first But we won the neurant" a fight. But we won the pennant."

Tha people in the Dodger front office remember those pennants. That's why Tom Lasorda is their new manager.

"The wildest fight I was ever in," Tom Lasorda was say-ing during the World Series, "was when I was pitching in Cuba in the winter league back in '52. I was pitching for El Mendares and Marinao bad a big first baseman, Chiquitin Cabrera, that I didn't like. This on Saturday night I turned him upside down a few times, then I bit him in the ribs. "I didn't even have a ball to throw at bim. But when he got real close, just when he was about to swing the bat at me, I threw my glove in his face and tackled him. "I don't know how I did it, but I lifted him up in the air and swigg him around. I guess my adrenaline was really flowing. That set off a dandy, and the cops were on the field and everything and the next thing I knew, I'm down in court with Cabrera, who is really in e jam because he attacked me with the bat in his hands. The magistrate there asked me, 'Do you want to press charges' and I told him, 'No just let me pitch to him again.'

"But the topper was the next day. I was at the beach with my wife when this army officer comes across the sand and tells me I have to go with him. I don't know what to expect, but I figure I better go along. I get in his car and off we go on a winding road up into tha mountains to this beautiful big home with soldiers with rifles all around it— Batista's palace. Batista himself comes out to apologize to me for what Cabrera tried to do,

"Is there anything we can do for you?" Batista himself asked me and I tell him the same thing I told the magistrate-'Just let me pitch to him again.' The next time we played Marinao, that Cabrera knew what was coming. I let one go that turned him upside down and inside out, but he didn't say a word. I once pitched a 14-inning shutout and beat Boh Shaw, 1-0, in the Winter League down there, but nobody ever talks about that. "All they talk about," Tom Lasorda says with a grin, "is how I lifted up Cabrera and swung him around."

'We Won the Playoffs'

And in Denver, where Lasorda also pitched, they remember a brawl in the American Association playoffs.

"We were down, 3-0, in tha series to Omaha and Ralph Houk, who was the manager there then, says to me, 'Can-you start a fight?' and I said, 'What inning?' Omaha bad a big pitcher named Barnes, who knocked down Tony Kubek, and on the next pitch Tony tried to drag a bunt but it went foul. I was coaching at first base between starts. I picked up the ball and fired it at Barnes, but I missed and when the third baseman picked it up, he fired it over at me. On the next pitch, Tony bunted fair and threw a block at Barnes and we had a dandy. Better yet, we won four straight to win the playoffs."

Tom Lasorda had a career 0-4 won-lost record as a major league pitcher with the Kansas City A'a after the Dodgers looked at him during both the 1954 and 1955 seasons.

"Buzzy told me he had to send me hack to Montreal and I told him, 'I can pitch up here, send somebody else down,' Tom Lasorda recalls. "Buzzy said, Who?' and I aaid, 'Sandy Koufax, he's not doing anything.' But Buzzy explained how Koufax had to be kept because of the bonus rule. So they kept Koufax instead of me, but nobody knows what would have happened if they kept me. Maybe I would have been better than Koufax-who knows?"

Now that's a positive thinker. And if the Dodgers are to dethrone the Reds, the Dodgers need a manager who is a positive thinker.

Yanks' Victory Dreams End in Red Nightmare

-Mickey Mantle next Monday for a four-... day vacation. His players will find their "own ways to unwind from the devastatits Series sweep and then, eventually, they will be able to remember what showing promise of more to come.

They also will come to realize that they earned a record paycheck for their postseason efforts. Based on an average 32 full Series shares, each Yankee player, manager and coach who spent the entire season in New York will re-, ceive $20,822, well over the previous record loser's sbare of $15,704.

The Reds figure to receive $27,763 each, also significantly more than the "" previous winner's high of $24,617. Wheo the Series ended the Reds bed achieved the 13th sweep in the 73-year history of the Series and the Yankees hsd suffered their third sweep and 10th ¹ foss in 30 postseason appearances. Bench, the catcher who had endured

"the worst offensive season of his oineyear major league career, won the Series most valuable player award and the posted the fourth highest batting an And then there was the other catcher, Thurman Munsoo, who showed why he will win the American League's Most Valuable Player award for the regular season. He finished the Series with six straight hits, equaling a Series with six and had a .529 average, the highest ever by a player on a losiog team.

Munsoo Hurt by Remarks

- After the final game, Sparky Anderson, the Reds' garrulous manager, suggested that no one should embarrass Munson or anyone else by comparing him to Bench, and the Yankee catcher retorted firmly by saying he reseated

"on''It's sad enough to lose," said the "a, suddenly outspoken Munsoo, who "batted 475 in the team's nine postseeson games, "but it's tough to have it rubbed io your face."

"I heard what he did," Martio said of Munson when the exchange was mentioned vesterday. "Whatever Thurman does is class."

"If some of the Reds were reacting with something less than class by sounding cocky about their victory, the Yankees couldn't be completely obsolved either of not giving the Reds as much credit as they deserved.

Throughout the Series, some of the "Mankees chided their strooger oppo-"neats for getting a lot of bloop hits. "Martin struck at that theme sgain yesterday.

"In the last game," the manager said, "They played up to their capabilities. They showed me what a good club they are. But that was the ooly Red power I saw. The rest of it was a lot of Red baloney.

Io speaking of power, Martin was referring primarily to Bench, who drove in five of the seveo runs with his homers off Ed Figueroa in the fourth inning and Tidrow in the ninth. Otherwise, the Reds played their most mistake-prone game of the Series, committing one base-running blunder and two errors that could have been costly. The Yankees, however, could not take advantage of those breaks.

If anything about the Reds surprised. Martin, it was their pitching. He fig-ured the Yankees would be able to score against the starters and then really start scoriog when the relievers came into the game.

The Cincinnati pitching, though, was better than he expected (the Yankees scored only eight runs in the four games) and the Yankee pitching was worse than he expected. Would Martin do anything differently with his pitching if he had a chance to do it over again?

Designated Nonhitters

"No," he replied. "In the first game I had a choice between Doyle Alexen-der and Ken Holtzman. I was influenced by Yogi. He knew the Reds pretty well and he said they could he stopped by offspeed pitching."

So Martio took his coach's advice and went with Alexander and Holtz-man wasn't scheduled to pitch until the fifth game. There oever was a fifth game, of course.

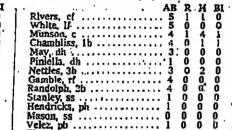

game, or course. Some people thought there had to be a deeper reason behind Holtzman's ioactivity in the playoffs and Series than his faulty pitchiog in the last part of the seasoo. There might have been, but Martio denied that any problems existed between them.

"I like Kenny very rouch," Martio said. "I never let personalities interfere with my macaging. If I did, there would be a couple guys who wouldn't bave played this season.

One of those players obviously was Elliott Maddox, who played in the first two games of the Series but oot in the last two after he struck out twice and grounded into a double play with a total of five meo oo base in the second game.

However, Maddox was only part of the Yankees' designated hitter problem, Carlos May went hitless in nine times at bat and made the last out in three inniogs Thursday night with a total of five runners on base. Altogether, the Yankee designated hitters collected one hit in 16 times at bat. The Reds, who had the dh forced cn them, got five hits in 14 at bats from Dan Driessen, their designated hitter

Now That Playtime Is Finished Baseball Gets Back to Business

The World Series is over, but the baseball busicess goes on. A pile of work, some of it of historic significance, remains to be done in the offices of the commissioner; the two league presidents, the individual clubs and the Players Association during the oext few weeks. Reduciog the player-management agreement reached last July to specific cootract terms has just begun. There is special urgeocy to spelliog out the finer details of the "re-entry" pro-cedure, by which the players who have become free agents by playing out their option years will be placed on the negotiation lists of various teams be-cause that re-entry draft (a term the players dislike) is scheduled for Nov. 5.

Some Players Can Refuse

There is also difficulty with the 1977 American League schedule, which conflicts with the regulations that govern scheduliog. For example, there is a rule that no team can be scheduled to play on more than 19 consecutive days; but with the American League expanding to 14 teams, there are instances of 24 10 47 consecutive days of play on various team's schedules. from the gold Cap at scratch time this morning, the main element of suspense involves Revidere. Can a filly, even a filly with eight firsts and a second in nine starts, beat male rivals in a race as demanding as the Gold Cup?

Only one female horse, Shuvee, has scomplished the feat. She won the race in 1970 and 1971. Under the weight-for-age conditions, 3-year-olds carry 121 pounds, older horses 126. Fillies and mares get an additional three-pound allowance.

So Revidere, owned hy William Hag-gin Perry, will carry the lightest weight today at 118 pounds. Since entries closed Thursday, the overnight line was still carrying Honest Pleasure as a 2-1 favorite. But Bertram Firestone'e 3-year-old colt, the beaten favorite in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, will skin the Gold Cup skio the Gold Cup.

. French Horse a Threat

With Forego expected to run until a couple of days ago. Honest Pleasure bad been sharpened for speed instead of for a mile and a half. His trainer, LeRoy Jolley, said yesterday the colt would run in Monday's one-mile Jamai-ca Handicap on opening day at Aqueduct.

That leaves Revidere, a 14-length winner of the J 14-mile Ruffian Stakes in her most receot start, as the proba-ble favorite for the Gold Cup. The sec-ond choice is expected to be Daniel Wildenstein's Astronomic Streamold Wildenstein's Ashmore, a 5-year-old horse flown here recently from France.

The word on Ashmore, trained hy Angel Penna, is that he is the best older horse in Europe. Yves St. Martin, his regular jockey, is flying here from France to ride bim. Ironically, five of New York's top six jockeys won't be at Belmoot to test St. Martin and his mount in the scramble for first-plece money of $201,360.

Jorge Velasquez has an assignment at Laurel today; and four others (Angel Cordero, Eddie Maple, Jean Cruguet and Roo Turcotte) made commitmente to ride io today's Canadian Internatioo-al at Woodbine, outside Toronto. The commitments were made before Forego. the 6-year-old gelding who bas clioched bls third straight horse-of-the-year title, was withdrawn from the Gold Cup earlier this week. Forego, winoing this fall with as many as 137 pounds on his back, would have been an overwhelming favorite. But a minor leg ailmeot convloced his trainer, Fraok. Whiteley, that the geld-ing shouldn't be asked to race again tbls year.

Of the six leading jockeys at the Bei-mont meet, only fifth-place Ruben Her-nandez will be riding in the Gold Cup. His mount' is Appassionato.

Had Forego stayed fit and run in the Gold Cup, the race probably would-not have drawn more than five or six borses at most. Fields of three or four have been common in the Cop. a test 1111 described by Jockey Club brochures as "racing's crowning event" and the 'definitive test."

Yesterday's Temple Gwathmey represented the secood leg in steeplechasing'a triple crown series. The series opened with the recent Grand National, and concludes with the $100,000 Colonlal Cup at Camden, S.C., Nov. 27. Tom Skiffingloo, the jump set's leading rider this year, guided Fire Control to his upset victory. Arctic Joe finished third and Happy Intellectual, part of a favored entry owned by Mrs. Ogden

Phipps, wound up fourth. Except for a brief four-race experiment at Aqueduct in 1974, the jumpers had been banished from dowoetate action since the 1971 eeason. But Charles Colgan, racing secretary for steeplechasiog, said yesterday the sport was increasiog in popularity. "We've got

if you're losing it doesn't do any good," sald Mendenhall, "Hard ain't the word for it."

A Changing Scene

It gets harder each year for Mendenhall, who is 28 years old aod not getting any closer to the Super Bowl. "If I ever get there one time, they're going to know I was there"). He mounted a step and surveyed the locker room.

"The faces have changed, the names have changed," he said, "But it comes out the same way. We're supposed to have some players now; but the record's not any better.".

The record iso't Mendenhall's fault. He has been double-teamed often this season, but still manages to get around the field, "With the team having a bad a lot of young horses," Colgan said. "We're hopeful of getting the back into action at Belmoot next year on a regular basis."

At Woodbine ...

Youth, Nelson Bunker Hunt's 3-yearold colt who won five stakes in France this year and was third in the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, heads the field in the S150 000-added Canadian International Championship over 15's miles on the grass.

Youth, recently syndicated for $6 million, will carry 117 pounds while meeting 12 rivala, including Effervescing, winner of the Round Table Handicap at Arlington Park and the Man o'War at Belment, both on the grass, and Erwin Boy, winner of the Edge-mete and Bowling Green Handicaps at Belmont and Aqueduct's Tidal Handicap, all on the turf.

The last time the Jets beat the Balti-Jones's losing performance against the more Colts a 23-year-old quarterback named Bert Jones completed 36 of 53 scoring team, averaging 30.5 points for every 60 minutes played, and Jones ranks first in the conference in passing. passes, including a National Football League mark of 17 in a row.

"We lost that game," says Jones, who Cts against the Jets again tomorrow in Sbea Stacium. 'I feel the worth of a quarterback is not how many he com-pletes but how many games he wins." By that standard, Jones is virtually priceless. The Colts are 5-1 this season. losing only by 3 points to the Dallas Cowboys, It is their only regular-season loss in more than a year.

The Nets had advertised, "Dr. J in the N.B.A.," and after Nate Archibald joined the learn the ads read, "Dr. J and Tiny A."

The Nets have refused to make refunds to season ticketholders.

Bob Carison, the Nets' lawyer and a partner in the team, said: "I don't think there is any basis in law for any inquiry by the Attorney General, Season ticket applications were mailed out last June, aloog with advertising to season ticketholders. The decision to trade Julius was made oo Wednesday. Obviously there was no fraud."

St. Thomas Golf Victor

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 22 (AP)-Doug Dixon and Donnie Hill helped the University of St. Thomas of Houston stretch a two-stroke first-round lead Into a 14-stroke victory in the Cen-tenary golf tournament today. St. Thomas had a 583 team total for two rounds ci play over the par-72 7.341-yard Funtington Park course. Houston Baotist University was second with 602, followed by the University of New Orleans with 605.

"Joe Namath still has a great arm," contends Jones. "There's no telling how good he could be if he had a good club." It is of little concolation (o the Jers that their coach, Lou Holtz, helieves Jones is a more dangerous performer than the New England Patriots' Sleve Grogan, who ran for more than 100 vards against them on Monday oight and passed them into oblivion, too. Jones Running Less

Jones had rushed only 17 times this season, but is averaging 6.2 yards a carry. In the past, he has run at least 50 percent more often.

"I ran out of fear," he explains, "I never called a play for me to run. This year, we've got better linemen and net-ter runners." There is also another reason why Jones does not choose to run.

"I realize a ballplayer's longevity is directly related to how many times he gets hit," eave Jones.

Jones, then, enjoys avoiding trouble, Heis not an accident-prone player. He eavs he was not even troubled by that bizarre owner-general manager-cnaching situation during the exhibition sea-50n.

That was the time Coach Ted Marchibroda quit because of front-office interference. It happened after the owner, Robert Irsay, chastised the players for a loss. Marchibroda had been unhappy anyway over his power struggle with the Colts' general manager, Joe Tomas.

Jones Sees Improvement Jones defended Marchibroda io the affair, criticizing Thomas.

"I try to find a blessing in everything," Jones says now. "There were three mules pulling in different direc-tions. Now, they're all pulling together."

He holds no grudges these daye against Irsay, who used to sit on'the players' bench but has decided to stay off the field during games. "I like Bob," says Jones. "He's a good fellow, I spent a week with him in Florida. It was kind of fun having time on the sidelines." 121 It always is, to a winner.

Bridge: By ALAN TRUSCOTT At its annual meeting last night at NORTH (D) ▲ KQ75 ♥ A52 the New York Hilton Hotel, the Greater New York Bridge Association re-elected Paul Kern as president for a second one-year term. He is the third man to WEST be so honored in the long history of 4 43 63 The administrative efficiency and 0 0872 ♣ J9832 notable leadership that he has displayed in his first year will be severely tested in 1977. Agression in Bidding Pass The first three bids were routine, West led the spade four. but Kern's aggressiveness came into play when he made a forcing bid of two clubs at his second turn. A more conservative player would have bid one no-trump or two spades. North's hand now fully justified a jump pref-erence to three hearts, showing in one fell swoop three-card heart support and substantially more than a minimum hand, probably with 4-3-5-1 distribution. But true to his principles, North contented himself with two hearts, a simple preference bid that could have been made with a minimum hand and a doubleton heart. South more than made up for this by jumping to three no-trump, when two no-trump would certainly not have been an underbid, but his partner felt he had not fully described his heart support and continued to four of that suit. Still pessimistic, he changed his mind when East doubled and reverted to no-trump. So Kern found himself playing four no-trump doubled instead three no-trump undoubled. West's opening lead of a spade gave businesses the declarer time. He won in the dumwork.

By holding up his ace until the third round throwing hearts from the dum-my, Kern was able to develop a squeeze position. He entered dummy with a heart lead to the ace and ran diamonds. East was unable to guard both major suits. North's habitual gloom lightened somewhat when Kern scored 810 points for a top score, and West was left to explain why he had not led a club and defeated the contract.

Books of the Times Women Who Work By ALDEN WHITMAN

AMERICA'S WORKING WOMEN: A Docu-mentary History-1600 to the Present. Compiled and edited by Rosalyn Bax-ardall, Lindc Gordon, Susan Reveryby. 408 pages. Illustrated. Random Hause Hardcover, S15; paperback, $8,95. NUNBODY SPEAKS FOR ME: Selj-Portroits of American Working Class Women. By Nancy Seifer. 477 pages, Illustrat-ed. Simon & Schuster. $10,95. WORLDS OF PAINT Live in the Working.

WORLDS OF PAIN: Life in the Working-Class Family, By Lillian Breslow Rubin. 268 pages, Basic Books, $11.95.

In the last couple of years the American women's movement has shifted its attention from liberation 10 workingclass women out of a realization, no doubt, that the earlier feminism was bounced by the professional and middle-class concerns out of which it was born. These concerns not only produced the powerful "The Feminine Mystique," but they also led women to ponder their special historical experience.

Sindies of this experience, particu-larly in the United States, have brought women generally out of the shadowland they had for so long inhabited; but, once in the sunlight, it was per-ceived that women, like men, could best be defined by the work they per-formed. Furthermore, in questioning why appeals against sexism and in favor of equality made so little dent among the majority of women, it be-came evident that working-class wom-en were different, that "sisterhood" was not a universal bond. Women workers, it was discovered, toiled under an overriding economic and social inequality. The attitudes of women workers, it was found, are shaped by two basic factors: They sell the labor power for wages

- often cut-rate wages - outside the home: and they also work "free" as housewives and mothers. They are the victims of a double exploitation. And he sexual division of labor in the factory and in the home leads to the chauvinism with which they are often treated by their busbands. If there is such a thing as a triple bind, women workers are in it.

Diligent Hunting

Like everything else, this has a his-tory, which "America's Working Women" sets out to chart coherently for the first time. As a result of diligent hunt-ing, the book's editors and compilers demonstrate that women workers have left a record of their thoughts, con-cerns and activities over the years, and that an optimistic native radicalism diffused them. To comprehend the depth of this feeling one has only to read Leonora Barry's Reports to the Knights of Labor, written in the late

Ordinarily, documentary history is as dull as dishwater, but the freshness of this book's material-it includes do2ens of first-hand reports like Miss

Barry's-makes it as sparkling as a glass of champagne. One of the book's implications is that women workers have strong feelings of frustration, ao attitude that Nancy Seifer deals with in 'Nobody Speaks for Me!' Armed with a tape recorder, M'ss Seifer, a former ethnic specialist' systems, to express themselves in some spersonal manner. Their frustrations are by very real. As one woman recalls: "I finally did go to college, just part ime for a couple of years, but my part and the for a couple of years, but my part and the for a couple of years and togo at all. I for a couple of years and togo at all. I for a couple of years and togo at all don't even have a year all together. but when I was going, they wouldn't when I was going, they wouldn't when I was going and board. My mother thought I should get mar-ried, bave kids and stay home. She was upset when I went back to work after having my kids, and she was very a upset when I took this job. It's not a woman's job! But she doesn't think to a woman's hould work, period " women should work, periud."

women should work, periud." Miss Seifer attempts to put her inter-views into focus in an introduction, and which can be safely skipped. It is full of foundationese, a special jargon that Miss Seifer has had the misfortune to acquire to the great detriment to clear, we parsible English. I am certain, never-theless, that Miss Seifer's heart is in the right place, for she is an obviously sancilive interviewer and has achieved we sensilive interviewer and has achieved wa genuine rapport with her subjects. Her women do come through, and the book should be read for what they have to say. These women—and others like them—are quite evidently the restless giant of the women's movement.

The portrait of everyoay life in the working class that energies from Miss selfer's book is reinforced by Lillian are brestow Rubin's "Vorlds of Pain," a tot socielogical sludy of some 50 West Coast families who live on incomes well below the national median of $12,000 a year.

Myth of Affluence

Writing without cant and in plain Eiglish, Miss Rubin describes a grim world of work without pleasure, of marriage without communication, of sex without love, of aspiration without fulfillment, In her families, life is so terren that men and women do not even bother to grin and bear it. It is a lanoscape that perhaps only a Dante could do justice to. As Miss Rubin sees it, the promises of American bounty always just elude the grasp of workers, who have been conditioned to prize such middle-class status symbols as color televisioo sets and shiny motor cars. On their inco-mes, though, workers sink into unend-ing debt to obtain what they regard as the emenities of life. Their near-poverty is also emotional and political in Miss Rubin's illuminating descrip-tion. tion.

Workers' wives are also affected by the myth of affluence that envelops their low estate. The virtues they most esteem in a husband are all negative. -14.1 "He's a steady worker; he doesn't drink, he doesn't hit me," they say. "Women," Miss Rubin asserts, "gener-ally suffer alone." And she adds:

"Oespite all the publicity generated by the women's movement about the dissatisfactions women experience in marriage, most working-class women continue to believe that their feelings are uniquely theirs. Few have any conlact with the movement or the people in it: few feel any support for their struggle from that quarter."

A Fair Proposal

The long and embittered dispute over the police conin tract may be nearing a settlement through what appears i to be a reasonable compromise. Mediator Michael L * Sovern, dean of the Columbia University Law School, "" and police union and municipal negotiators are to he commended for arriving at a formula that strives to in-accommodate rank-and-file objections to the original contract offer without violating the no-cost mandate that has been imposed on the city by state and Federal 'c::overseers.

the mediator's proposal gives the union the 6 percent pay raise for last year which had been withheld but .; calls for a deferral in the current year so that the policemen will sacrifice one year of the increase, exactly the it same condition that other municipal unions have already bad to accept. The amnunt of money involved is the " same, but the officers will receive more of it sooner than would otherwise have been the case.

The new duty schedules, which have been the target of vociferous objections, will be revised to give the men more time off between tours; but they will be required " to work the ten additional days each year, as stipulated under the original city plan.

Members of the union are to be offered a choice on the emotional issue of one-man patrol cars. If they insist in on maintaining two men in a car, they must agree to give up roughly $18 million in fringe benefits to pay for ar the rehiring of 400 laid-off officers who would, the city says, provide an equivalent amount of increased patrol time.

Appointment of Dean Joseph M. McLaughlin, of Fordham Law School, as a special trial commissioner within the Police Department to hear charges of misconduct in the course of the past weeks' picketing promises officers _ involved in these incidents a fair hearing. At the same in time it assures the public that acts of lawbreaking and -lapses in discipline will not be ignored in the interests -of accommodation, as has too often been the case in the past.

Details of the mediator's proposals still need to he scrutinized hy the Emergency Financial Control Board to make sure they do, indeed, conform with all the requirements of the city's financial plan and wage guidealines. At first look, they appear to meet those criteria and to offer a fair settlement. Members of the Patrol--men's Benevolent Association and their familles, to "whom coples of the complete text of the mediator's "recommendations are being mailed in advance of the . ratification vote, should read them with full appreciation of the effort that has been made to respond to their grievances within the limits imposed on a city in , adversity.

of courage trying to find a foothold in our tottering world," who realized that "the value of life depends on its dignity, not its success."

Although the Canadian-born novelist is Jewish, his men and themes reach across religious. ethnic and national boundaries. Even in his new nonfiction journey, "To Jerusalem and Back," he meditates on the meaning of mankind today and its civilized roots in the past. In what the Nobel citation aptly called "his most imaginative expedition," Bellow's Henderson sought a cosmic truth in primitive Africa. His characters are not simply marvelous talkers; they are picaresque adventurers on a flight from, or in pursuit of, life.

The Swedish Academy did not award a Peace Prize this year. If the literary imagination is stretched, Bellow's anti-heroes can be considered anonymous men of peace, looking for it within themselves and within the small circles most of us inhabit.

Europe's Currency Move

The upward revaluation of the West German mark reflects an effort to keep a dream alive, the dream of a United States of Europe.

The nine nations of the European Economic Community (E.E.C.), having achieved a customs union and a common agricultural policy, bave been striving to advance their goal of political union by progress toward economic and monetary unity and-as the ultimate capstone of success-a common currency. It has been an uphill struggle with many backward slides along the way.

The "snake" system of closely tied exchange rates, jointly floating against the dollar and other currencies, was too much for Britain from its start in April 1972; and London had to withdraw after two months. Italy dropped out in 1973. France left in 1974 and again last March, only eight months after returning with fanfare. But the abortive French effort to come back belped sustain the view that it was worth continuing the rump grouping of smaller currencies around the German mark, as a pole of attraction to which the other, and weaker, West European economies ultimately would return.

The trouble recently has been that even the stronger economies in the joint float have been falling hehind the German powerhouse. West Germany has reduced its inflation rate to one-half, or even lower, of that of most of its neighbors. With lower production costs and export prices, the mark's value has climbed 24 percent since 1972, half of that gain in the last nine months alone, pulling up the other currencles that are in the joint float with it.

How to Prevent Municipal Bankruptcy

To the Editor:

Felix Rohatyn of the Municipal Assistance Corporation stated recently that it might be necessary as well as practical to extend the due date on certain obligations of our city to allow more time for bringing the municipal budget into balance.

All lenders like high interest rates. So long, indeed, as borrowers have seemed to be able to meet interest payments, lenders have been willing ... to assume that the blessing of receiving "permanent" income onlyweighs principal amounts of otherwise inall consideration for whether or not such arrangements may or may not be building up permanent economic dislocations by postponing the reduction of indebtedness...

To cite a self-evident example, rentcontrolled real estate in New York City, having insufficient income to meet its obligations, found that by paying higher interest (deductible before calculating income taxes) it could borrow more and more, and carry on with the additional capital borrowed. It seemed this sort of borrowing could be justified by continued advances in real estate "values." We are too likely to forget that "prices" don't always reflect real "values." For real values are relative and are very much upset by monetary inflation.

Uncle Sam, of course, didn't want to see America's largest city go bankrupt, but Uncle Sam seemed to forget that the Constitution bad placed in the

'Tax Relief for the Rich' To the Editor:

In signing the Tax Reform Act of 1976, President Ford stated that "the" best tax reform is tax reduction"; in addition, he indicated that he is especially concerned with reducing the tax burden on low- and middle-income Americans. Finally the President claimed that Congress bas blocked real tax reform by falling to increase the personal exemption from $750 to $1,000.

A $250 increase in the exemption reduces the tax liability of a taxpayer in the 70 percent bracket by $175. The tax reduction for a "middle-income" taxpayer in the 22 percent bracket is only $55. And for low-income taxpayers who pay no income tax, an increase in the personal exemption yields no tax benefit. Thus it is apparent that President Ford either does not understand the income tax coosequences of such an increase or. is trying to hide from the American people the true impact of his proposal. Once more, the President has proven Jimmy Carter's point: The Republican version of tax reform is tax relief for the rich. JAMES K. DREYFUS RICHARD J. BRONSTEIN New York, Oct. 5, 1976 hands of the Congress the power "to make uniform laws on the subject of hankruptcy." Obviously such power must include laws designed to prevent bankruptcy.

To prevent buildruptcy, the Congress could have granted endangered cities a stay on the payment of interest provided either amorbization payments equivalent to interest or such smound as could be held to be reasonable were returned to the lender. This could have started the writing down of the payable loans and permitted lenders to live on returned principal during the emergency and wait for interest until the ability to meet it could be restored. Certainly there is warrants for such: action by the Congress. The nation's total of mortgage debt has risen from approximately $43 billion in 1982 to well over $600 billion in 1975, So much interest is being demanded from real estate in our cities today, especially in New York, that the municipalities have been faced with arrears in tax payments greater than ever before. Mr. Rohatyn's suggestion seems. unimaginative. The suggestion that the Congress grant cities a stay in interest is, of course, oversimplified. But through a better understanding of facts it should be possible to work out composition agreements which might include other alternatives. ARTHUR C. HOLDEN : New York, Oct. 5, 1976.

What Carter Didn't Say To the Editor:

William Safire accusesJugular Jimmy" Carter (column Oct. 11) of using the guilt-by-implication technique that was employed effectively by Nixon against Helen Gahagan Douglas and others. Then Safire exploits the same technique himself

First be lists in Italics, as paragraph headings, a series of insulting names that Jimmy Carter called Ford. Then he admits, in a sentence slipped in at the end: "Of course, Mr. Carter didnot actually call the President dope, liar, pinko or crook. He only implied as much."

Clearly, Mr. Safire-in the phrase coined by his bumbling candidate: Gerald Ford-should not "throw stones at people who live in glass houses."

Saul Bellow, Laureate

In giving its reasons for awarding the Nobel Prize "for Literature to Saul Bellow, the Swedish Academy offered a remarkably perceptive critique of the Chicagobased but internationally respected novelist.

The judges noted that his early books had helped to emancipate the American novel from what had be-"come the hard-boiled writing formula of the 1930's and to point a new direction in the postwar years for that familiar, dangling, universal man, the anti-hero. But Bellow's rich characters-Augie March, Herzog, Sammler, Humboldt, Henderson the Rain King-were not simply losers or passive people. They were "men have seen increasing strain on their halance of payments, reserves and currency rates, which dropped to the permitted floor. Interest rates have heen raised to bring in money from abroad and finance trade deficits. But ... that has inhibited recovery at a time when unemployment remained high.

The question now is whether the 2 to 6 percent increase in the mark's value against the other allied currencies will prove sufficient to restore currency stability to Europe. Most experts doubt it and there is a danger that speculators will keep funds moving.

What is most important is that Bonn resisted pressure in Germany to let all Common Market currencies float freely. By preserving the joint float, while realigning exchange rates within it, hope is maintained that movement toward a common currency can one day resume.

Congress: The Region

Continuing its comment on Congressional elections, The Times limits itself today, apart from the two Senatorial races, to those House contests in New Jersey and Connecticut that fall within the metropolitan regionthat is, the northern half of New Jersey and Fairfield County in Connecticut.

New Jersey

Senator Harrison A. Williams, Democrat, appears to be in little danger of losing the seat be has held since 1959, which is as it should be. While Mr. Williams has been too unquestioningly compliant with the demands of the trade unions, he has grown considerably in his long tenure. In particular, he has made himself an important force for reform in such areas as pension law and the marketing of securities and bas rightly come to be regarded as a champion of health and safety legislation for industrial workers and of various social protections for the aging. His little known Republican opponent, David F. Norcross, has conducted a moderate and sensible campaign, but there is no valid reason to remove Senator Williams.

" There are only two Congressional districts in New Jersey where the results promise to be close, but in both cases the seats of superior incumbents are at stake. Both Democrats, they are Representatives Andrew Maguire of the Seventh District (western Bergen County) and Helen S. Meyner in the Thirteenth, in the northwestern part of the state.

Mr. Maguire, one of the most thoughtful of the 1974 crop of freshmen, is especially well versed in foreign affairs, having served as an adviser at the United Nations. In his first term he devoted himself as well to the intricacies of the energy problem. His consistently liberal second has emphasized the distance between himself and his opponent, James J. Sheeban, Republican, a commodity broker who opposes revenue sharing and the state's income tax.

Ç,

" Mrs. Meyner is opposed by an experienced state legislator with a reputation for Republicanism of the moderate-to-liheral brand. But, with a full term's seasoning and a record that matches, Mr. Maguire's for positive action, she deserves to be returned to the House, While there are no other tight races in those of the state's districts that are close to New York, we are glad to renew our support for several incumbents whom we have endorsed in the past: Representatives James J. Howard in the Third District, Frank Thompson Jr. in the Fourth, Peter Rodino in the Tenth and Joseph G. Minish in the Thirteenth, all Democrats, and Millicent Fenwick, Republican, in the Fifth.

Connecticut

This year's campaigns for Congressional representation from Connecticut are remarkably free of suspense. Secretary of State Gloria Schaffer, Democrat, is an appealing and competent candidate for Senator, with good record in state office and proven ability as a vote-getter. But Senator Lowell P. Weicker Jr., the Republican incumbent, is considered the overwhelmingly probable winner-and no wonder.

In his one term as Senator, Mr. Weicker made himself a nationally-known figure by his determined independence, by his intensive grilling of witnesses at the Senate Watergate Committee's hearings and by his unflagging opposition to the corruption of the Nixon Administration.

Senator Weicker's independence, far from having harmed him, seems to have won him a large measure of bipartisan support among the voters without costing him the support of orthodox Republicans-especially those who are running for office on his coattails. In spite of an overworked flair for publicity, we believe he has earned re-election.

In the one Connecticut district where there is anything like a close contest, it is difficult to work up more than minimal excitement. Representative Stewart B. McKinney has compiled a mildly progressive record in his six years of representing Fairfield County. His opponent, Geoffrey G. Peterson, is a young lawyer who served for a time as Senator Abraham Ribicoff's administrative assistant. He offers the full array of social programs; but in view of Mr. McKinney's experience and record there is no overwhelming reason to oust this moderate Republican incumbent. "

To the Editor:

I deplore your emphasis in your news columns on President Ford's having accepted golf dates from hig business. How many times have Congressmen, their wives and families taken expensive trips to foreign lands to be lavishly entertained by the governments of those lands while it was the U.S. taxpayer who paid for those vacations? How many times has the taxpayer been questioned whether

Danbury High's Unresolved Problems

To the Editor:

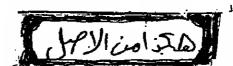

Your Sept. 27 news article 'Danbury High, Once Racially Split, Is New School Today" showed that tokenism can be captivating, even to a reporter from The Times.

For two years I have devoted much time to the racial problems of this town, and have been facing a complex and disheartening situation. The city government is interested in the problem mainly when it concerns elections or the ecnnomic growth of the area. Too many members of the education community deny that racial problems exist. Danbury High School is still far too repressive and institutionalized to be considered a "new school."

The problem is one of basic human understanding. The philosophy of keeping the students out of the halls and shortening their lunch time has averted confrontation, but traffic control does not ease the pain of the disadvantaged student. The students who are motivated, independent and organized have few problems, and they can handle the abbreviated schedule. They are good students, and as long as they remain in the right place, at the right time, they are welcome. It is the students who need help, just a little understanding, perhaps a little love, who are in trouble. They are potential trouble-makers, and are reporting an affair that was happening in a small auditorium before a few It was a splendid illustration of the most uplifted minds in the nation laboring to violate the spirit of law while adhering to the letter. A lower cnurt discarded the nbjections of Eugene McCarthy and Lester Maddox, two of the less minor candidates, who complained they were being defrauded of their right to equal time. The Supreme Court, like the vast American public yearning for a new political morality, chose not to review the case. At this stage the lagality of the business seemed infinitely arguable. Would the League of Women Voters have asked Messrs. Ford and Carter to debate in a small hall if television's presence were not assured? Of course. What political organization wouldn't? Would Messrs. Ford and Carter have agreed to show up, even to suspend their campaigns and concentrate heavily oo the debates if not guaranteed a national television audience? Possible, but doubtful.

Such questions became irrelevant, however, when the television sound went dead with 27 minutes left in the first debate. As Mr. McCarthy pointed out next day, the debate did not proceed for the beoefit of the few hundred for whom it was supposedly being staged. It stopped dead until the network repaired its equipment and put the television audience back in communication.

The patent fiction that had been constructed to dodge the law was expnsed when the audience in the hall was shown to be nothing more than spear carriers decorating a television

People who thought it important to hold these debates despite the inconvenience of the law may agree with the Dickens character who cried, "Your law, sir, is an ass." And so it sometimes is, as Mr. Nixon and company might privately agree.

It is odd, however, to have so many splendid people tacitly saying so in a campaign where so much is being made of respect for law. In the loog run, the precedent may also have unpleasant implications, for it concedes to the Democratic and Republican Parties a monopoly on access to political audiences.

The irony is that this disreputable business was the result of the new campaign spending law. Its spending limitations would have made it extremely difficult for most of us to get. any impression at all of the candidates without the debates. These limitations were imposed to prevent another Watergate. The result has been to make us all conspire in another kind of show of contempt for law. Like so many generals, our reformers

Military-Industrial Complexes

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-Much as in the United States although on a smaller scale, France's military-industrial complex has simultaneously become a political fonthall and deeply involved in a scandal that could produce a kind of French variety of the Watergate and Lockheed affairs.

The story first exploded when a high official of Marcel Dassault Aviation Company, manufacturer of the famous Mirage fighters, among other aircraft, vanished temporarily last summer with a large sum of money. He later reappeared but tales of blackmail, misappropriation, tax evasion, bribery and general malfeasance, involving wellknnwn Frenchmen, have been leaking nut ever since.

While all this is still under judicial investigation and because more than one politician'a name has been mentioned, the affair is nnt easily written about without risk of libel or unfairness. Yet there are indications the mess will be kept at a steady boil through the 1977 municipal elections and maybe into the 1978 legislative campaign.

Different factions are accusing each other of leaks in order to embarrass political opponents; or of seeking to maximize allegations of tax evasion; of threatening blackmail; or of trying to embarrass a project to nationalize the aircraft industry, including the Dassault company.

Meanwhile there have been simultaneous developments in French aviation planning and also hints of possible . change in France's strategy, aligning it more closely with that of the NATO alliance.

Despite the fame of such products as the Mirage or the supersonic

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

(Anglo-French) Concorde, France bas regretfully discovered it can no longer profitably make and sell civilian aircraft and, for military planes, must depend on the relatively limited market available in nations which for political reasons, don't want to buy American.

Foreign sales for French concerns are based on man-hour work assumptions extrapolated from a six-month period. These figures run very high because the local market guaranteed inside Fraoce is so much smaller than the comparable local market for American civil aircraft inside the United States. Thus the internal guarantee for France was five orders for Concorde, ten for Mercure, nine for the Airbus. This compares with a usual internal sale of 150 for any oew U.S. type marketed in America. The cost of the "learning curve" in producing aircraft can be four times greater for the first ten planes manufactured than for the first three bundred. The net result is that, just as Dassault, the leading French aviation manufacturer, becomes involved in what looks like mushrooming scandals -and is simultaneously faced with possible nationalization-it is casting about for cooperation with United States companies as partners in joint aircraft production. For the moment this decision-which can be considered definite-applies only to civil types. Nevertheless, it is obvious that it cnuld perhaps be applied also to an increasing number of military projects, especially if French ties to NATO continue to warm up. President Giscard d'Estaing bas already moved closer to the alliance than was the case in previous years, since de Gaulie extricated France from NATO's military command structure. Many Gaullist leaders, while joining with Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's supporters to form a political majority, have opposed this trend toward "re-integratinn" into NATO. One result has been that by trying, more than the other allies, to go it alone, France has maintained a force under arms comparable to that of West Germany but on a defense budget almost 20 percent smaller. This produces a swollan overhead of pay costs for officers and men. and a sbortage of conventional equipment. Now, to the surprise of many Giscardiens and the amazement of many Gaullists, a group of well-known Gaullists has started to ponder the possible return of France's military forces to the alliance command structure. This group, called Réseau Trnvailleurs et Citoyens, includes Gilbert' Grandval, a World War II Resistance colonel and formar Cabinet minister during da Gauile's presidency; and Ambassador Etienne Burin des Roziers. secretary-general of the Elysée Palace while General de Gaulle was chief of. state. The argument now considered is that perhaps France, thanks to the panoply of nuclear weapons it developed under the Fifth Republic, no longer has anything to fear by once again placing its military forces at the permanent disposition of the NATO command. The reply given by. the Réseau to its own question is not yet categorical,

child and parental responsibility. This educational effort, coupled with a better family-planning delivery system, would gradually decrease the need for abortions until abortion became a nonissue.

It is sad not to hear one mention by candidates, pro-abortionists or right-to-lifers of the hard realities facing a world growing by 72.3 million persons a year. Though empirical data are difficult to obtain, the Population Crisis Committee report of July 1976 states that each year 30 to 55 million babies are aborted, legally or illegally, and against all religious and political proclamations. This means that there are four abortions for every ten babies born, it is a staggering figure in light of our shrinking communicative, technological world.

Yet abortion is a major method of fertility management, say the experts, and, without abortion and other birthcontrol means, world population growth would be at a 2.2 percent rate, not the declining 1.8 percent it is today. Even at this 1.8 percent rate, the world will double its population in 35 years.

According to a study by Christopher Tietze and John Bongaarts: "It is unlikely that any population has ever. attained a low level of fertility (2.2 children per family or less) without the use of induced abortion, legal or illegal. Barring a major breakthrough in contraceptive technology or major modifications in human sexual behavior, levels of fertility required for population stabilization cannot be easily obtained without induced abortion."

Abortions are increasing in countries where family-planning services are limited, and declining in nations with well-funded, widely available familyplanning services.

China has reduced its birth rate from a six-child family to a two-child family by using the combined policies and programs of sterilization, oral contraceptives, IUD's, condoms, legal abortional health services, -postponement of marriage to a later age, and education.

Taiwan, Chile, Mauritius and South Korea similarly have gone from an average six-child family to a threechild family by similar means, with the emphasis on increased familyplanning services and education.

So let the issues in the United States be expanded family-planning delivery systems and better and earlier familylife education in the schools and bomes, not abortion.

of the pressure of time."

It was not a Mr. Balogh who entered my office in Budapest on Nov. 1, 1956, but Major General Berecz of the justdissolved secret police.

As a general, Berecz was a member of the court-martial that condemned ma to death in 1952 on faise charges of spying for the United States, subversion and sedition. (I had been commandant of the Command and General Staff Academy and was a major general.) Later on, as superintendent of political prisons, Berecz caused agonies for tens of thousands.

The only reason for such a man to come to the National Guard beadquarters might have been to re-arrest many of us-had the Soviet Army returned. But the revolutionary Government of Prime Minister Imre Nagy was in firm control. Berecz certainly had another reason.

"I apologize," Berecz said, "for what 1 did to you," adding an unprintable self-abusing vulgarism. The former I appreciated; the latter disgusted me. 1 retorted harshly, "What do you want of me?"

"I went into hiding when your side won. I was frightened that 1 would be discovered, so I decided to surrender voluntarily. I hereby surrenderl"

"What a profound compliment this Stalinist has paid to the purity of our revolution," I thought. Then, to let him sweat for five minutes, I summoned a squad of freedom-fighters to my room, and placed him under its custody. As the members filed in, I let Berecz stand at the, wall facing their arms.

"This man entered our headquarters under the false name of Balogn, but he is Major General Berecz of the secret police," I said. "He is suspected of crimes committed against the people."

The freedom-fighters became visibly excited as they realized that the trembling, small, fat, pale man was one of the despots of the recent past. Then, to prevent further commotion, I concluded: "General Berecz surrendered voluntarily. Therefore, he is entitled to our protection. He must not be hurt, or we'll be accused of vengeance. -Transport him to the central prison, and, if someone wishes to attack him, protect him."

In a little while, the commander returned with a written certificate, acknowledging the transfer of Berecz to the prison, unhurt.

An eventful 10 days had passed since Oct. 23, when in a peaceful, massive demonstration the people of Budapest endorsed the 16-point program of students of the Polytechnical University of Budapest that demanded the end of Soviet colonial domination of Hungary and the replacement of the totalitarian regime with an open society in a pluralistic, democratic state. The demonstrators were met with volleys of fire from the secret police Nov. 4, the defenders needed a spe-

that, rather than cowing the demonstrators, inflamed passions to the breaking point. The People's Army was called in, but, after a hrief period of hesitation, its men went over, in everincreasing numbers, to the reformers' side Within hours, Soviet troops stationed in Hungary and Rumania marched on the capital city hut were headed off by the resistance of a suddenly united nation. A temporary standoff led to an armistice on Oct. 28 and to a new multiparty, democratic socialist Government established by Nagy. This peaceful political and social order was overthrown by Soviet aggression that gether." Moscow, of course, never began Nov. 4, 1956, three days after 16 Soviet divisions with some 2,000 tanks rolled into Hungary.

Why did the Soviet Union attack Hungary? For three reasons, at least, 1. The Soviet military, still under Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, demanded the control of Hungary as a site for missile bases. Soviet ordnance in 1956 contained only intermediate ballistic missiles, which could reach certain Southern European strategic targets only if deployed in Hungary. We know that Zhukov threatened to resign if Hungary was not reoccupied.

2. The residual strength of Stalinists in the Soviet Politburo could prevail over the rest and press through adoption of the idea that an anti-Soviet chain reaction would be the inevitable consequence of letting democratic socialists stay in power in Budapest.

Nikita S. Khrushchev confessed in a 1957 speech at the Csepel iron works. south of Bndapest, that in a prolonged debate in the Soviet Politburo hefore Nov. 4 the majority initially opposed military measures in Hungary.

3. The Chinese Communists, still allied with the Soviet Union, urged the Kremlin to suppress the Hungarian revolutionary Government lest a global disintegration of the Communist camp occur. (The exchange of mutually denunciatory letters by the Chinese and Soviet Communist leaders in the early 1960's contains a letter in which the Chinese claim that they were tha ones who prevailed over "the Soviet revisionists" to give "aid to the Hungarian" proletariat.")

Whatever the main reason, in the early morning hours of Nov. 4 the aggression started,

Nagy's Government did not want war with the Soviet Union, not even a defensive one. There was only a linear defense perimeter around Budapest for observation and to secure the Government a few bours' or, at best, days' delay in case of attack. The soldiers and freedom-fighters manning it had been forcefully instructed not to fire on Soviet troops except in an ultimate emergency; to avoid giving the Soviet troops any pretext for interference, these orders had been emphasized continually. When the massive Soviet offensive began in earnest answered the phone. When 1 informed Nagy in tha small hours of Nov. 4 that there had been a major break in the Budapest defenses and that a Soviet column was nearing the Parliament building, where he had his office, he told me coolly: "I don't need any more reports."

A few minutes later his voice came over Radio Budapest-emotionally: "In the early hours of this morning Soviet troops launched an attack on nnr capital city with the obvious intention of overthrowing the lawful, democratic Hungarian Government. Our troops-are fighting."

"Our troops are fighting," Nagy told the nation and the world, yet to his commander be bad said: "I don't need any more reports." There is a glaring disparity hetween these two remarksbut only at first sight.

Nagy wanted no more reports from me because the obvious consequence of any new data on the Soviet advance would have been the need to order the Hungarians either to fight or to lay down their arms. The fact of a state nf war between two socialist countries could no looger he disregarded. But Nagy could not in good conscience give any combat orders.

The ruins of Budapest after the siege at the end of World War II were still too vivid a memory, and a war with the Soviet Union would have been vain bloodshed anyhow. By affirming that Hungarian troops were in action, Nagy neither encouraged us to fight nor advised us to lay down our arms.

Too much treachery had been committed in recent Hungarian history against men who had surrendered in good faith. Imre Nagy could not acquiesce in war.

Instead, be left it to history to pass judgment on the socialist state that bas the dubious hunnr of being the first to have made war on another socialist state.

Béla K. He is on leava, with n Guggenheim fellnwship, writing a book on war and society in the 19th and 20th centuries.

Y

Yet the fact that the issue has been raised by those who now do so could be of great significance to tha Western alliance and, ultimately, to France's beleaguered military-industrial complex.

97% of the aerosol spray paints manufactured today do not affect the ozone layer

Unfortunately, most people have been led to believe that all aerosols are harmful to the future of our planet.

That is not true.

The majority of aerosol products on the shelves right now are in no way suspected of affecting our environment. Guilt-free, you may enjoy the convenience and efficiency of virtually all spraypaints, insecticides, shaving lathers, and food toppings.

The confusion has resulted from the blanket condemnation of all aerosols—when the point in question is not aerosols, but the use of fluorocarbon gases as propellants.

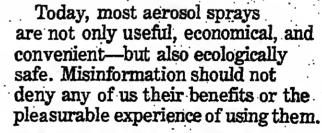

A panel of The National Academy of Sciences has considered the problem of fluorocarbon gases weakening our planet's ozone layer and threatening to affect the earth's climate. They have recommended select regulation of the uses of fluorocarbon gases and have suggested two years be allowed for further scientific study.

Unquestionably, that is something scientists and government agencies must resolve.

But we feel it is equally important for the people to understand that the greatest number of aerosol products produced in this country do not use fluorocarbon propellants. Almost without exception, all spray paint manufacturers use hydrocarbons, and hydrocarbon propellants pose no threat to the earth's upper atmosphere.

We at New York Bronze state unequivocally that none of our products contains fluorocarbons. Furthermore, we pledge to avoid the use of any chemicals or systems that have been adjudged harmful or deleterious by any recognized and responsible authority.

Do you remember the mess we would go through to paint with a brush? Do you remember the nuisance of making shaving lather? Or the time and trouble in mixing and dispensing insect sprays? Or whipped cream?

"The other day we talked about fluorocarbons, the aerosol spray can propellants that maybe damaging the environment, and I think it's possible that we left a false impression among some viewers. What we said during the discussions, and what I want to emphasize again, is that fluorocarbons are the propellants used in only about half the spray can products on the market. There are other propellants used in oerosol spray cans that are NOT suspected of cousing any environmental damage—the propellants used in spray paint cans, just os one example. So don't automatically shy away from EVERY spray can product on the market out of concern for the environment. Kenseuroer products is free of suspicion." Tom Brokaw, Today Show, 201976 environment. landmark agency. The Miller house proposents presented their case to the National Register in a document by Thomas Parker, a historian and a mem-ber of the North Castle Bicentennial Committee.

'Still Plenty of Tories'

His report, entitled "A Problem of Evidence: Will the 'Real' Washington's Headquarters Please Stand Up," was available at a rathering at the Miller house today that attracted Richard L. Ottinger, the area's Democratic Repre-sentative, who is running for re-cleution; Mayor Alfred Del Vecchio of White Flains and his wife, and members of the White Plains D.A.R.

Mr. Ottinger, a liberal, seized the occasion to charge that there were "still plenty of Tories in White Plains."

Mrs. Denslow Dade, the D.A.R. chapter's regent, referred to the "roughshod attempts by another group" to deny recognition of the Miller house, which was rurchased by the county in 1917 and turned over the the D.A.R. for res-toration and upkeep. "Did you know that Jacob Purdy's two brothers and his father were Tories?" she asked. "Why would Washington use that house for his headquarters? It's absurd, just as it is to have a headquarters right on the front line." The Purdy house, in its original loca-tion in downtown White Plains, was near the front line in the historic battle. which rew Washington's forces tempo-rarlly thrown back. The house was overrun in a skirmish a few years ago when the hostile forces of urban development prompted its transfer. Purchased by the City of White Plains and turned over to the Battle Committee for restoration and upkeep, the Purdy bouse was moved to a new location on nearby Purdy Hill for use as an educational and historic site, in much the manner of the Miller house. It stands shuttered and empty, however, awsiting appropriate funds.

Battle Waged for 44 Years The struggle over Washington's headquarters for the battle of 1776 began in earnest 44 years ago. Mr. Farker said, when a local historian, W. S. Hadaway, made a claim for the Purdy house. Until then, It had geoerally been acknowledged only as the general's beedquarters in 1778, when there was no battle.

Historians, politicians and local organizations have been engaged in their own battle ever since. Miller forces concede the Purdy house to Washington in 1778, but deny it absolutely for 1776. The Purdy adherents concede that Washington stayed briefly in the Miller house in 1776, but insist that it was only after the battle.

Higher taxes for Americans working abroed may reduce their numbers considerably and may cause some United States companies to leave France. The tax-revision bill signed early in the month by President Ford increased the taxes for Americans overseas, many of whom may have to pay higher taxes than Americans at home. U.S. Judge Rules the City's Board and Chancellor Failed to Set Up Bilingual Education

By ARNOLD H. LUBASCH

The Board of Education and the School Chancellor of New York City were ruled in contempt of court yesterday for having "failed steadily and repeatedly to exercise their power" to expedite a bilingual educatioo program for Spanish-speaking tion. er students.

could be ordered later if they fail to carry European military balance. . out the bilingual program.

Acting on a complaint by Puerto Rican groups. Judge Marvin E. Frankel made -2 the contempt ruliog io Federal District Court in Manhattan. The groups, led by Aspira of New York, demanded that schnol officials comply completely with a 1974 agreement to improve the educa-tion of Spanish-speaking youngsters who had difficulty with English.

Judge Frankel declared that the courtapproved agreement in carry out the bilingual program "remains in full force and effect." He said there was oo need for bim to issue a "newly pbrased command" to Chanceller Irving Anker and the Board of Education.

Request for Receiver Denied

Aspira had asked Judge Frankel to Aspira hau askeu suuge rranaei to order the school authorities to "purga themselves" of contempt by completely carrying out the hilingual education pro-gram. If the authorities fail to act immediately, Asyra sai, the judge should appoint a "receiver" to take over the schools with regard to enforcing the bilingual program.

However, tha judge observed in the 35page contempt decision that it was not necessary at this time for him to consider "the heady, but conceivable, thought of a receiver." A spokesman for Chanceller Anker and

A spokesman for Chanceller Anser and the Board of Education said the school authorities would not comment until they had studied the judge's decision. The city's school system has about 200,000 Spanish-speaking youngsters.

The 1974 agreement between the school authorities and Puerto Rican groups involved a consect decree to carry out a program that called for identifying the students in need of bilingual instruction, devisiog specific forms of instruction, providing instructional material, training , the required staff, obtaining the neces-rsary funds and making periodic reports,

Some Improvement Noted

The judge noted a recent improvement in efforts to carry out the bilingual pro-gram. But be stressed that his contempt ruling was based on a finding that the school authorities "violated their obliga-tions under the decree by failures of diligence, effective control and steadfast pur-pose to effectuate the prescribed goals."

The fact that goals were not achieved. or achieved only partially and tardily, is not io itself a ground "for either criti-icizing the defendants or bolding their conduct contumacious," the judge said, adding

Since before Labor Day, Mr. Weinberg said, the staff of 1.400 has been waiting to care for patients in the empty 18-story red brick and poured concrete structure.

Money a Concern

The opening of North Central was viewed as a signal victory by most of the staff, but there was concern that there would be battles ahead to make aure there was enough money to fully operate the hospital.

Dr. Harold Osborn, an attending physician who is vice president of the North Central Bronx Action Committee, which had been staging regular demonstration in an effort to get the hospital opened, said obtaining the certificate was "a tremendous step forward but it isn't the

"They could keep us underbudgeted and understaffed," Dr. Osborn said, "and North Central could turn into another death trap like Lincoln." He was referring to the new Lincoln Hospital in the South Bronx, which was opened earlier this year by the city's Health and Hospitals Corporation in the face of the city's deepening budget crisis. There have been charges that patient care at Liocoln bas suffered seriously because of a lack of financing.

Last month the boy wanted to be an accountant, but later on he decided he wanted to be an airplane mechanic. Not only that, he shuffled his feet and indicated he did not want to waste much time talking to Joan Kazin, his guidance counselor at Manhasset High School in Long Island,

It would have been easy for Mrs. Kazin to rush through the session, but she had met the boy before, and she felt he was maturing in his own

"Tell me about it," Mrs. Kazin said, putting ber smile out front. "Why do you feel that way?"

While the boy talked, Mrs. Kazin searched through her college guides and the folds of her memory, and was about to write down seven colleges offering courses in airplane mechanics. Neither scolding nor babying him, Mrs. Kazin challenged him to seek information on those schools. When the boy left the office-more pleasant than when he entered-he had been counseled as well as guided, perhaps without even knowing it. This is the bybrid role of that peculiar species known as " guidance coun-selor," a breed that is expected to get young people into colleges, recommend careers for them, and spot personal problems as they develop.

Sometimes Criticized

Guidance counselors are sometimes criticized as "paper-sbufflers." and many students feel they cause more problems than they solve by recommending wrong courses or wrong uni-versities, or by not really caring about

"I would never tell anything person-al to a guidance counselor," said one senior. "There are other places you can get help like that." Counselors insist they are overburdened by details they did not invent, and see themselves as the first to be threatened by budget and staff cuts. Yet many who have chosen this field can relate success stories that make it all worthwhile.

Thelma Gaba, from Kennedy High School in New Orleans, remembered how she persuaded a girl with a promising intelligence quotieot to take achievement tests. After the girl scored in 90th percentile, Mrs. Gaba told her, "You can do anything." Until then, the girl had "felt very badly about herself," Mrs. Gaba recalled, but she became a student leader in high school and is now on full scholarship at Vassar.

"For a small number of people, I have been a lifesaver," said Dr. Robert Silverstone, a counselor at Staples High in Westport, Conn. "I think, in signifi-cant part, they are still alive because of some interaction with me."

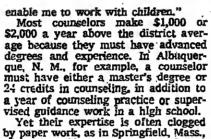

Many parents have criticized coun-selors who they felt had failed to recognize the gentus. In their youngsters, while many self-proclaimed "successes" can recall the counselor who suggested

Joan Kazin, below, a guidance counselor at Manhasset High School. Right, William S. Curtis, also a counselor, advises 12th-grader Melanie Pores, 17.

Counselors are supposed to be many things to many people. As Allen Tor-lakson, principal of Washington High in San Francisco, puts it, "Counseling presents optioos. It does the kinds of thiogs a good parent or a good friend does: giving a sense of recognition, a sense that somebody cares about you, along with the how-to's of fioancial aid and college application."

Most counselors say they weot into the work because they liked it. George Singhel, chairman of the department at Manhasset, said be bad switched to counseling from teaching social studies because, "I found my students were seeking me out. I felt my skills would

It also lists statistics oo how many Manhasset students have been accepted and rejected at hundreds of colleges.

"TH never tell a student not to apply, bnt I will advise them to apply to one 'safe' school," Mrs. Kazin said.

Last year, one senior was not accepted at her top Ivy League choice, and ber father apparently went around town blaming Mrs. Kazin, who still shulders when she recalls the pressure on her.

The guidance office at Manhasset is a colorful, bustling nerve center, where students pore over shelves of college catalogues, or beat a path to their counselors door. In one balf hour, Mrs. Kazin was visited by four different students, all without appointments, and she had some belpful words for each --

"You've got to be persistent," said . Richard Chassin, an intense senior, echoing a comment heard around the country. "Whenever I have a question, I go see Mrs. Kazin, When I had my interview for Harvard, I asked her, 'Pop some typical questions at me.'

The counselors get to know the 1 motivated kids, and I guess they to know the real problems. But happens to the kids in the midd hape they don't get lost."

A Shop in the Suburbs Lures Lovers of Down-to-Earth Crafts

By LISA HAMMEL

Crafts bunting is getting better all the time in the suburbs, as good shops keep opening, or established ones expand and show better wares.

The Yellow Door, in Tenafly, N.J., is in the latter class. Starting in a tiny store about four years ago, it has since moved to a larger, airy shop at 24 Washington Avenue. This is a professional crafts shop, differentiated at a glance from those bobby-oriented cooperatives where one can find some charming work and low-priced, handmade gift items, but little professionalism. And as has now virtually become standard operating procedure with serious crafts shops, the Yellow Door bas mini-shows that change about once a month.

But the stock-in-trade is utilitarian, handmade pottery, with at least tokens of other media, from art glass to jewelry.

The pottery, which ranges from salt-glaze mugs at $3.50 to huge planters at $100 to $450, is displayed in a number of settings: simple wooden shelves resting on cinder blocks, open glass and chrome display cases. a pebble-filled front window aod cozy little niches at the back of the store.

The variety of styles, finishes and types of clayware and porcelain are far-ranging, within a fairly traditional mode. It should be possible here to satisfy all but the funkiest tastes. Prices tend to be a bit higher than in comparable shops elsewhere, bow-

The shop was opened originally by Alice Sorensen, a crafts collector. Sbe was joined shortly thereafter by Betty Turino, who had tried her hand at both painting and pottery. Then a year ago, a third partner joined the eoterprise, Jean Allen, whose spe-cialty is stitchery and fabric crafts. •

Even gift shops are getting bitten by the crafts bug. Take Jorice, for instance, an attractive little place that opened last spring at 1057 Sec-ond Avenue (near 56th Street) with a well-selected assortment of mostly a well-selected assortment of mostly imported accessories and objects. Recently, it decided to get involved in American crafts, and held a two-person show-the porcelain work of Nancy Marchand and Vanessa Obten. The show proved so successful, according to Maurice Mogulescu, the shop's co-owner, that although it was supposed to have eoded recently, the work is still being carried.

Miss Obten makes rather austere. white vases with faces balf-emerging from the clay. Miss Marchand does three-dimensional faces, too, rising up cloudily from the corner of, say, an irregularly shaped platter. But she is more coocerned with flora.

Lacy patterns of leaves and flowers, pressed into the surface of the creamy white porcelain and high-lighted with a luster glaze and some-times the merest brilliant smudge of color, appear on vases, cups, coffee pots, lidded containers and even a butter dish.

Miss Marchand also does very large, open bowls, suggestive of giant flowers whose petals are caught unfurling at some split second in a time-lapse frame.

Prices range from $8 for little oblets up to $90 for some of the argest pieces.

But Is It Really Yogurt?

By MIMI SHERATON

"Is frozen yogurt really just yogurt that has been frozen?" a frieod who is a devotee of that latest food craze asked recently.

The answer, after some brief but thorough research, is no, not by a long shot. In fact, considering the chemical additives used as stabilizers, emulsi-fiers, flavorings and colorings found in three of the four frozen yogurt mixes sold around town, this product may swell go down in history as the world's first bonafide junk health food. Even though no claims for naturalness are made for any frozen yogurt other than Dannon's Danny-Yo (which 'is, as advertised, 100 percent natural), the ingredients used in mixes by Hood. Colombo and Lacto will probably come as a surprise, if not a shock, to most -of the afficionados of this cool and creamy dessert.

For while many of the people who eat fruit or vanila-flavored frozen yogurt in cones, cups and sundaes do so simply because they like it, most feel it is, in general, what can be con-sidered a health food product, free of artificial ingredients and, therefore, "pure."

Not eveo the Dannon Danny-Yo is "yogurt and ooly yogurt," for reasona that will be obvious to anyone who has tried to freeze yogurt at home. Handled that way, the yogurt freezes in icy splinters and, upon thawing, separates into cheesy curds. Some substance is needed to retain the spin smoothness of the product and to make

 \mathbf{v}_{i}^{*} wa it strong enough to hold air when it is whipped

Dannon's answer to tha problem is plain, unflavored gelatin, similar to the standard Knox type used in cooking. In addition, flavor is added in the form of fruit that has been cooked with sugar to a sort of preserve.

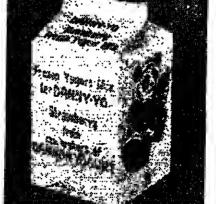

The Dannon product, in contrast to the others, is a lighter, more delicate cream, paler in color bnt somewhat bland in taste.

Frogurt, the brand name of the frozen yogurt mix made by H. P. Hood in Massachusetts, is the thickest and creamiest of the lot, and therefore is considered "richest" by its fans. This emollience, which some would find definitely gummy, is achieved with the following combination of ingredients:

Cultured milk (yogurt), sugar syrup, corn sweetener, concentrated strawberry juice, water, sodium citrate, lo-cust bean gum, sodium carbozymethal, pectin, mono and diglycerides, polysorbate 80, artificial flavor and artificial color.

Colombo's product, available in New York only at Everything Yogurt on lower Broadway near Exchange Place, is not as sticky as the Hood product. but not as smooth as either Dannon's or Hood's. It was slightly rougher in texture, not quite sandy but almost, and its flavor bordered oo the acrid.

Ingredients in this hrand differ only slightly from the Hood product and include both guar and cellulose gums. corn syrup solids as well as angatto and turmeric extracts for color.

The worst frozen yogurt tasted was Lacto, made by Johanna Farms and served at Curds & Whey, a new self-service restaurant on East 45th Street, said by one of the owners to feature "healthy" food but not "health" food. The strawberry yogurt there was thin and watery and had the cheap pink flavor of bubble-gun. All of these yogurts, the pure and the impure, have similar calorie counts, lower than ice cream, but hardly low enough to give dieters free rein. All averaged 25 to 33 calories per ounce by weight, or about 145 calories in a czpful.

"Probably the public does look toward yogurt as a natural product," said Daniel King, president of Frost-yogurt, which distributes Hood's frozen yogurt in this area, "But if the good Lord made chemicals just about the same time he made vegetables and strawberries, aren't they more or less natural too?"

Coping With the 'Pain of Liberatic's Krochmal [C] from her basic misunderstandities with the the cosmettics with

Francisco there was one counselor for every 351 students, and this year there is one for 415. The national average is

1 to 350 in the suburbs and 1 to 800 in the cities. And in New York some 'schools are without guidance counselors because of recent budget cuts. Naturally, the small, affluent suburbs are more fortunate as in Manhasset, a small district nestled in hills and shady streets. The junior and senior high schools are combined to ooe charming old brick building, where there are seven counselors for 1,300 students.

The students are given some form of group guidance in every grade and are then scheduled for individual sessions.

From seventh through 10th grades, the emphasis is on personal adjustments,

On the plus side, says Dr. Martin Symoods, a psychiatrist, the liberation movement is breeding some "wonder-fully independent and resourceful career womeo." But not so happily, he adds, it is also breeding women who are developing an impatience and io-tolerance of depeodeoce of any sort.

Such iotolerance, he believes, is only adding to the myriad of problems in-volved in what he calls the contempo-rary woman's "pain of liberation."

"For those with children," he said, "it means that they expect their children to grow up as soon as they're born. They want the children to be more like themselves, resourceful and independent. And the children are not prepared for this."

In his private practice, Dr. Symonds deals with a number of children of career women and sees special conflicts arising between the mother and child.

"While the children rarely complain about the father being away from home, they freely express their anger at their mother for being away." said. "The mother, they feel, should be for them olone."

He added that the husband/father also suffered feeling as though he were being neglected, since he grew up expecting to be continually nurtured by all women, whether it be his secretary, mother or wife.

These conflicts and others that have come up in the practice of Dr. Symonds and his wife, Dr. Alexandra Symonds, led the two psychiatrists to begin a New School course eotitled "Emotiooal Conflicts of the Career Woman." Dr. Martin Symoods deficed the "career woman" as any woman whose primary interest was in developing herself and whose secondary interest was in her family and children. He said this priority of interests, along with causing immense interior conflicts, created many conflicts at home.

In defense of the new "career woman," the couple were quick to point out that their emphasis oo the professional woman's conflicts should not be taken as a criticism

The career woman has enough guilt, without our adding to her load of prob-lems," said Dr. Martin Symonds. "All lems," seid Dr. Martin Symonds.

A Variety of Topics

The Symondses' course, offered under the auspices of the American Institute for Psychoanalysis Karen Hor-ney Ceoter, covers such topics as fe-male aggression, the neurotic de-pendency of successful women, the career woman's conflicts with her family and children, marital conflicts and reentry problems for older women.

Students include female lawyers, banking executives, medical students and doctors, women in their own businesses and law enforcement officials. (Last semester one man, a middle-aged doctor, signed up for the course, saying he hoped it would belp him better understand younger women, including his daughters and daughter-in-law.): The couple agreed that one of the working woman's main conflicts came

Parker, Baritone, Lives Up to Rumors

By RAYMOND ERICSON

There bad been some promising advance word about William Parker, a baritone who made his New York recital debut in Alice Tully Hall Thursday night. He had won many prizes; he had been singled out in public by Pierre Bernac, one of his many teachers, as an extraor-dinary talent; his recital here was an award from the special "Joy in Singing" course presided over by Winifred Cecil.

Mr. Parker, who is from Butler, Pa., had not gooe far into his ppening number, Beethoven's "Adeaide," before it was evident that the favorable rumors were true. Here were elegant German diction, mmaculate phrasing and a warm, smoothly produced voice. The combination was completely reassuring—the listener knew he could sit back, relax and savor the music, which is the best of tributes to a performer.

Eveo while enjoying the muslc. one could still appreciate the value of Mr. Parker's interpretations. Besides the Beethoven work, be sang three song cycles, each a searching test of the singer's art: Pou-lenc's "Calligrammes," Bartok's Five Songs (Op. 16) and Schu-

mann's "Dichterliebe." The barltooe sang the seveo bittersweet Pouleoc songs as if to the manner born. The phrases were gracefully turned, and the voice arched over the soft high phrases easily. In the Bartok, which was sung

Orpheus Times Light,' Piece By Arpino, at Joffrey Ballet

RPHEUS TIMES LIGHT (World Premiere), Choreastraphy, Gerald Arpino; music, Jose Samefor, Mr. Screbrier; harp isi, Linda Phillips, With

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

The wonderful aspect of the leg-end of Orpbeus is that even after the hero has been torn apart and his head is floating io the river, he still goes dowo singing.

Art is eternal, this myth seems to say, and Orpheus was the arche-typal poet and musician, Gerald Arpino does not quarrel with this nspirational message and he presents it in highly contemporary theatrical terms in "Orpheus Times Light." The ballet had its world premiere with the Joffrey Ballet hursday night at the City Ceoter.

It is a very spectacular produc-tion. It is also vulgar, but it succeeds oo all counts as theater. The impact is so strong that there is even a quality of "You Are There" fo the scene in bell, or Hades, where Orpheus seeks, then loses his wife, Eurydice, after he breaks the taboo of looking back at her. Each element of the production contributes to this impact. Willa Kim is responsible for the sci-fi costumes, the drapelike scrims and Mylar boulder that create a grim grotto ruled by Pluto in silver body paint, powerfully character-ized by Christian Holder. Thomas Skelton provided the subterranean lighting. José Serebrier, who coo-ducted, has composed a score that are dictably uses a harp to simu-late Orpheus's lyre but then offers some surprises in Its percussioo and vocal effects.

"Orpheus Times Light." sbares tha same sensibility as Mr. Arpino'a "The Relativity of Icarus," but m this case the emphasis on mate clinches io the choreography has its dramatic justificatioo. Borrowing an idea from George Balan-chine's "Orpbeus," Mr. Arpino sees Mercury, the winged messenger who crossed souls over to Hades, as an angel. And here too it is Eurydice rather than Orpheus's own impulses that cause bim to look back.

Essentially Mr. Arpino tells his tale in three ducts for Orpheus. In the first, the hero is partnered like a woman by the angel, per-haps symbolizing an aspect of bimself. There is also a karatestyle duel for him and Pluto. The best duet, his tragic journey with Eurydice; also owes much to the famous Balanchine duct. The difference here is that the other Eury-dice pleaded; this one nags. The story appears to be told in flashback. We see Orpheus bound in a cat's cradle of elastic streamers. At the end he is again Orpheus bound. But suddenly he plays the strings that bind him like a lyre and the image changes dramatic-ally into an Apollonic frieze of Orpheus overpowering the forces of darkness.

in Hungarian, Mr. Parker seemed equally at home. His secure intonation made light of the dissonances and intricate writing that can he a challeoge to the singer, and there was a plausible intensity of emotion to color the prevailingly gloomy cycle.

The 16 songs in the "Dichter-liebe" posed the biggest test for Mr. Parker, partly because they are so well known and have had so many distinguished interpreters. It would have been hard to fault the baritone in anything he did. He steered a clear line between the cool, impersonal reading and the excessively detailed approach.

A basic simplicity was coupled with subtle and sensitive accents. One could point to pbrase after phrase that, were lightened or, weighted just the right amount to underline the sentiment being expressed. The performance may not have rivaled the great Fischer-Dieskau's, but it surely must have been as good as anyone else's.

Since nothing is perfect in this world, there were minute flaws that could be picked in Mr. Parker's singing. The voice is what is called short, so that low notes were occasionally tremulous and high notes strained. A few phrases fell off into inaudibility. Yet these things did not matter in the overall beauty of the perform-, ance.

The planist for the evening was William Huckaby, whose playing was brilliant in the Poulenc and Bartok cycles and admirable in the Schumann if sometimes a bit. oversensitized. Mr. Parker added as encores two songs by Ives and Copland, sbowing that his English enunciatioo was as clear as could JONAN WILL BE 25 IN YHE YEAR 2000. French film with English sublities by Alaln naer, at the Fina Arts Theater.

Events Today

This is a male-oriented ballet but in their cameo spots, Ingrid Fraley's Eurydice and Miyoko Kato's Persephone made their mark. Dermot Burke's Orpheus succeeded in the by-no-meanssmall task of enhancing his role with dignity. Robert Thomas's angel, with Darrell Barnett's and Robert Medina's messeogers, rounded out a cast that was extremely well directed.

Linda Phillips the wordless vocalist lack Larson wrote the poem that inspired the ballet's title.

Cabaret

She projected the essence of Brahms's Sonata No. 1 in E minor as convincingly as she negotiated the pyrotechnics of Chopin's Introdoction and Polonaise Brillante, and she managed the rhythmic buoyance of Ginastera's "Pampeana" No. 2 as authoritatively as

The aim of his Organic Music Theater now seems to be a universally accessible music, containing elements from almost every culture he has visited yet built on structures simple enough to allow for audience participation.

The music's basis is an apparently endless array of catchy ostinato figures, most of them rhythmic enough to encourage dancing, over which Mr. Cherry sings, explains the mantras of Sanskrit formulas that have inspired some of his rhythms and melodies, and improvises on his pocket trumpet. SIP TRIP ' A program featuring Johann Sehastian Bach's "Coffee Cantata" apply opens the second season of Lincoln Center's informal Coffee Concert Series this afternoon at 4 o'clock, as Richard Kapp conducts the Philharmonia Virtuosi of New York and soloists in an hour-long session without intermission. Then the musicians will mingle with the audieoce-over coffee and doughnuts, a popular innovation last year at Alice Tully Hall covered by the S4 admission. Tickets are available at the hall's hox office.

MANE EVENT Two famous wits are represented in new arrivals on the Off Off Broadway boards. With George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" doing very nicely uptown as "My Fair Lady," the doubter Long Context Party the downtown Jean Cocteau Reper-tory is reviving "Androcles and the Lion," a rarity on the local sceee. Eveo more infrequently dramatized here are the writiogs of Dorothy Peders although contact of the straight Parker, although some of her stories and monologues-such as the three vignettes now on view, with a cast case, the Brook-are easily stageable. It was Shaw's airy contention, in his well-known preface to "Androcles," that the early Onristians aroused Ro-man ire and brought about their own persecution not because of their faith, but because they were coosidered cranks. This jaunty tone prevails in the play, along with the colliding Christians and Romans and an uousual tion. The entire Coctean resident compaoy, numbering 25, is on hand for their third production this season, un-der Eve Adamson's direction, rotating the Shaw with "Macbeth" and "Rhinnceros" through mid-December. "Androcles" goes on tonight at 7:30 and tomorrow at 3 P.M. Tickets are $4, $3 for students and the elderly, and $2 for children. For reservations and the complete schedule: 677-0060. The company theater is at 330 Bowery (at 2d Street).

HEARTS AND THORNS Lillian Silverstone and James Morris are curreotly performing "Three by Dorothy Parker," as staged by Victoria Brady, at 9 P.M. on Thursdays, Fridays and poetry, mime and dance. The titles in the new production should ring a bell with Parker fans, starting with "The Telephone," in which a tense woman awaits a call from her lover. In "You Were Perfectly Fine." a hungover young man is anxiously placated. "Here We Are" opens and closes with a newlywed couple coofrooting each other in a Pullmao compartment.

HIT PARADE Hunter College, Lexingtoo Avenue and 68th Street, is the site tonight and tomorrow of an imported production titled the 1976 Israel Hasidic Festival, featuring a group of young singers, composers and entertainers who woo top hooors in that country's annual competition. The homeland song fete, held under the auspices of the President of Israel, is open to international composers, with the visitors beginning their American tour in New York.

Sbow time is tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. For information oo tickets, priced at $5 to S10, call 580-7165.

THEY DO, THEY DO Last call to catch Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt tonight and tomorrow at the Ballroom in the current series of various Broadway songwriters reodering their own works. Word from the cabaret-restaurant in SoHo is that the composer-lyricist team ("I Do, I Do," "The Fan-tasticks" and "110 in the Shade") is drawing enthusiastic response at 458 West Broadway (south of Houston Street). Show times are tonight at 9:30 and 11:30 and tomorrow night at 8:30 and 10:30. The Ballroom has an entertaiomeot charge of $5. Reservations: 473-9367.

About New York

Lights! Camera! Politics!

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Norman Kramer survives in liva television without a hot-comb.

He has never been on camera through all 14 years and 675 shows of a Sunday program on Channel 2 known as Newsmakers"-one of the few live television shows left in the city and the longest running. Mr. Kramer's face and timbre are not his fortune; his mind and manner are. He is the show's producer as well as a principal in piecing together the station's weekeed news programs and, thereby he is one of the chief keepers of the city's Sunday political ghetto.

This is a state of affairs the public should know about in which the gen-eration by public figures of zew charges, reports, candidacies, crises, nostrums and general all-purpose developments slows drastically from the workweek. Mr. Kramer's job is to fight this condition, the way the cardiolo-gist fights the nonbeating blip on his cathode-ray tube. He tries to get a known public figure speaking at high noon on Sunday, saying enough in the next 25 minutes, either deliberately or accidentally, to make news beyond the curved plywood desk that has been the show's main prop since its beginning. It isn't easy. The first show, in September 1962, featured Mayor Robert F. Wagner, a politician who made the search for the unsensational public appearance into an art form. After that beginning, it was not until the following year that the show garnered it first front-page score io the Monday morning newspapers.

"Mike Quill was asked what he thought of the latest transit contract offer," Mr. Kramer recalls. "He held it up to the camera and said, 'I'll tell ya what I t'ink of it!'-and he tore up. A sweet leprechaun of a man. He bad other copies and tore them up later so the newspaper photographers could get a picture."

Symbiosis with the print media is a not unusual. The show has a television personality as its host, but hires two newspaper reporters who are familiar with the specialty of the guest as questiooers. They get $75 each. The guest is not paid, and gets only coffee and cake and the chance to be made up by Frances Arnold, a friendly woman who knows every pore on Walter Crookite's face.

Any of us weary with the constant sight of the city writhing each day for its next breath should be reassured to know that on Sundays public officials come marvelously close to resting from their work and keeping their voices

Many of them and their aides separ-ately watch "NNewsmakers" as an electronic busman's boliday, gauging, with the candor that private Sunday brunch cao guarantee, the bobbingi and weaving taleots of the fellow professional holding down the tube.

The questioning and answeriog is televised from a place where mooing and milking was once the derivative source-the old Sheffield Farms dairy on West 57th Street, off 10th Avenue. There, in the control room of Studio 46. the professional's nervousoess that only live performance can generate is as palpable as the cigarette smoke puff-ing forth from Mr. Kramer and the rest of the technical staff. They sit in front of a bank of 17 television screens as if they were about to launch a rocket rather than the latest words of an earthbound politician.

Being live, the program has an extra possibility of excitement in the unexpected. Once, the chair holding Charles Luce of Consolidated Edison collapsed. But it was a minute after the show went off the air, so we sll missed a special public event. Mr. Kramer, a considerate amiable man, can laugh now at the memory. But as producer, he must see to every detail, and now he even wonders about the chairs once in a while. He chooses the guest and interviewers in the middle of the previ-ous week, calls them up, makes sure they arrive and are in makeup in time, suggests questions to the panel and even cuts the coffeecake some mornings. In all the years, Mr. Kramer's nightmare of the guest's not being on camera when the show begins has materialized only twice. Once, Paul O'Dwyer got as far as the front door but spotted a union picket line. "These are my peo-ple," he told Mr. Kramer apologetically. The reporters wound up interviewing one another.

The other time, Governor Byrne did not make it from New Jersey in time, and Representative Edward I. Koch of Manhattan obliged by rushing from downtown. He filled seven minutes of questioning and then, after the first commercial break, was replaced by Mr. Byrne,

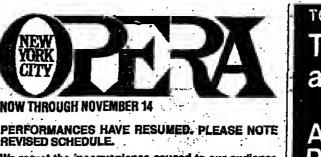

Mr. Kramer states the show's promise very well; "This is one of the few places out in the open for a politician to try and get his point across while reporters can interrupt him." This may not sound very special, but it does prevent the scene from turning totally into an electronic hustings, Mr. Kramer knows that even a show that does not make news can be revealing if it demonstrates how evasive a politician can be.

Last Sunday was a good one for Nor-man Kramer. There were no beadlines produced, but the guest showed up, his chair didn't collapse and, right before air time, Mr. Kramer spotted a peanut on the rug that would bave demeaned the oroceedings.

The camera rehearsal right before the show got to the beart of the matter when the director was sayiog, "Then Al will fast break [camera] three to Diaz [the moderator] for the questions and answers-blah, blab, blah.

Twenty-five minutes later the guest was still into the latter and encroachlog on he final commercial time when the assistant director in charge of such things shouted, "Cut him! Cut him! Cut him!" The politican faded from the live television along with the brieffest sight of the name of Norman Kramer.

The sbark screen was invented by ... Clarence S. Johnson, an assistant department head at the Naval Undersea Center in San Diego, who was granted Patent 3,986,220 this week. The Government holds rights to use the invention.

The bag is to be made of a black. thin film material such as that commercially marketed under the trade name Mylar. The surface is to be coated with an aluminizing layer to act as a radar reflector. After the bag is unfolded and filled with water, the disaster victim : crawls inside: . . .

The bag's onter surface is free from protuberances that might attract sharks. The occupant closes the top of the bag by pulling a drawstring, so that little shows above the water and he is fairly well hidden. Mr. Johnson considers this screen superior to a bulkier one he patented in 1969.

Davenport receives $925,000 a year in community development funds, its share of Federal money based on a formula that takes into account its population

Soybeans rose sharply in price yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, with the November contract closing at $6.50 that takes into account its population, overcrowded housing and the extent of

The "no frills" concept was aimed at producing a small, basic house similar to those built just after World War II, with relatively few amenities and perhaps two bedrooms and one bath, comprising about 1,000 square feet of living space.

But, a study completed last week by the National Association of Home Builders indicates the average size of oew homes is still increasing. According to this study, the average size of homes evaluated by the association in-creased to 1,638 square feet from 1,615 square feet, while the average lot size on which the homes were built in-creased 17 percent during the year.

These figures suggest that the much talked-about trend to smaller bouses did oot bappen," Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the association said. · Housing specialists are unanimous in their view that the rislog prices of oew homes are pricing more and more peo-ple out of the bousing market, but there is disagreement over just how serious the problem is. In the latest of a series of such In the latest of a series of such studies by groups around the country, the California State Department of Housing and Community Development published a report this week declaring that "six oot of 10 California families cannot afford the basic single-family new bome.

Yet, such figures mislead because currently more than 60 percent of American families already live in their own homes

What the figures mean is that, based oo the current average new home prices, and current average salary levels, more than half of the American families probably could not afford a new bome-aod in fact, perhaps many could not qualify for a mortgage if they had to buy their own homes at current price levels.

I have to tell them, 'well, there just isn't anything you can afford,' and they look at me as if I'm crazy.

"But you'd be amazed that a lot of young couples do manage to buy a house by working for several years and saving. The trouble is that inflation has gotten so bad this past year or so that even if they save $5,000 a year-maybe the wife's whole salary-they find in-flation bas eaten up maybe twice that much."

There are significant differences in rings accounts, not only between nmercial banks and thrift instituns-the latter, as the following table ws, are permitted by Federal horities to pay higher maximum erest rates but among the same e of institutions, too.

rcial Banks Savings & Loan 5 percent 5.25 percent 3.5 percent '-3.75 percent datalf years 6 percent 6.5 sercent and-a-half to four years 4.5 percent 6.75 percent 7.25 percent 7.5 percent to Six yeers fot all banks, however-commercial savings pay the maximum allow-e rate. That's why it pays to shop. In between the Dime and Brookiyn ings, for example, there are subtle erences.

oth are paying the ceiling rates, but okiyn Savings insists on a minimum osit of $1,000 in all but its ordinary ings accounts.

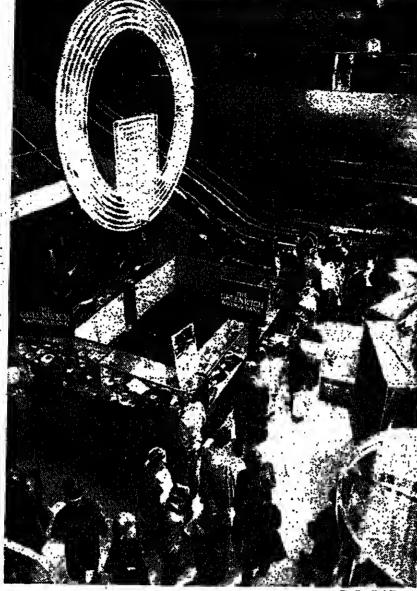

he Dime, on Its 6.5 percent and percent certificates, is taking $500 imumas, but, like Brooklyn Savings, laid down a $1,000 minimum for 7.5 percent and 7.75 percent.

nther, a depositor must agree to) his money at the Dime for at least months to get 6.5 percent, while term for the same rate at Brooklyn ngs is only a year, e differences, among other things, ct differences in branch locations management strategy. They are, ver, differences that might prova rtant to some depositors-just as mparison of the banks' basic rates their competitiors' might prova vrtant, too.

daily compounding basis on all their accounts,

Many commercial banks, on the other hand-Citibank, for examplecompound daily only on long-term accounts-and compound quarterly on regular passbook accounts. The difference in yield can be significant.

It is particularly significant for systematic savers-individuals who try to hank a specific amount each month and who rarely make withdrawals. Savers of that kind not only benefit significantly from daily compounding, but according to the Dime's Mr. Mc-Dermoit, are also probably better off Dermont, are also propagy better on in a regular rather than a day of de-posit-day of withdrawal account. De-posits in the latter—as the name sug-gests—generate interest from the point at which they are put in an account to the point at which they are taken out. They are another savings barker

They are, another savings banker agrees, best for "in and outers" whose thrift accounts tend to look like a slowmotion checking account, DW's, as they are known in the trade, do not reward systematic savers with the "grace days" that go with regular savings accounts in many banks. A saver who makes a deposit within the 10-day grace period is entitled to the same amount of interest he would have received if the money had gone in on the first day of the month-in effect, a 10-day bonus that could amount

It is clear, however, that convenience is often more important to some savers than the kind of the return they are getting.

According to the National Mutual Association of Savings Banks, commer-ical hanks in both New York and New England have been broadening their share of the regular savings account market despite their lower rates. The trade group attributes that expansion to the "wider branching systems" of the commercial banks and "their broad-er one-stop financial services." er one-stop financial services," .

Until the mid 1950's, vodka sales were so small that vodka wasn't even listed as a separate category of spirits by the United States Government: It first became popular in California in a drink called Moscow Mule, which con-sisted of ginger beer and vodka sold in a copper mug.

Heublein began promoting the product and in the mid 1950'a decided to bet $150,000 on advertising Smirnoff volka. Designed to promote volka as a fashionable item, the Smirnoff ads were unusual and "almost surrealistic," according to Chris Carrinolo, executive vice arguident of Houblain vice president of Heublein.

Succession Of New Drinks

In the 1960's, more companies started to move into the market and Heublein pioneered a succession of new drinks. By the early 1970's, the industry bad managed to identify its best vodka audience as mostly young people who wanted drinks that cost less than bourbon and were lighter in color and taste. The industry has since concentrated on that target group.

Industry experts project that vodka sales will continue to grow. "It is great for people who don't like the taste of liquor and still want the kick," said Gerald Friedman, senior vice president, director of marketing at Seagram Dis-tillers Company. "And that's a very broad-based audience."

Factory Into Apartments

In 1967, a young architect named Timothy Anderson remodeled the old Prince spaghetti factory into apart-ments for himself and a group of friends. It was the beginning of the revival of the waterfront. revival of the waterfront.

"Since the Second World War, Boston had turned her back on the waterfront," said Mr. Anderson, who works in a striped rugby shirt, has achieved a reputation for building-recycling and sets out an impressive array of bottles on Friday afternoon to facilitate his firm's discussion of design problems. The whole area was cut off from the rest of the city by an elevated expressway. A few people-wharf rats, some called them-lived among the old warehouses. Mr. Anderson recalled sadly, but virtually all of them are gooe now.

The change has been swift. In 1970, The change has been swift. In 1970, the population of the 102-acre water-front district was 943, up 72 percent in a decade. By this fall, a state census put the number of residents at 3,400. "It went from no neighborhood to the most desirable neighborhood," Mr. Anderson said. Some $52 million in public money and more than $50 million in private investment have gone into the project, including the well-designed, grassy, trellised park that, aloog with the new market, forms what the city likes to call its Walkway to the Sea.

call its Walkway to the Sea.

Not According to Plan

Like many of Boston's recent urban renewal ventures, the waterfront did not go exactly according to plan, and is the better for it. The original project called for widespread demolitioo, high-rise office huildings, apartments and hotels and an 80-foot-wide roadway cotting off access to the water. The surviving remnant of the plan are the two blocky spires of the luxury Harbor Towers apartments, which replaced Bullfinch huildings on India Wharf. A new waterfront residents association and the Sierra Club fought the plan, filing suit against the Boston Redevelopment Authority. A review committee was appointed and in 1973, the housing authority modified the plan, reducing the roadway, providing more once and ice new building. more open space and less new building.

 <t While the middle-class went to court. there was more direct opposition from another quarter. A continual rash of fires was set in the district. Around City Hall, these became known as "C-2" fires," after the urban renewal parcel in which they occurred, and were quite openly considered to he the product of the resentment of the waterfront renewal among residents of the adja-cent North End. The problem eased after a group of North End merchants got a wharf to develop into a galleria, although the project has since run into snags.

Italian for 80 Years

One of the city's oldest neighborhoods, the North End has been over-whelmingly and intensely Italian for more than 50 years. At the clubs of young and old men on its narrow streets, English is rarely heard, old women in black shop for big, close-knit families in stores hung with rabbits and sausage, and the Franciscan Fathers tend their garden. It is largely a poor naighborbood, its unemployment rate of 22.3 percent the highest in the city. Most of its hoosing is turn-of-the-century tenements, about a third without kitchens or baths.

It is one of Bostons' most picturesque neighborhoods, and there is a fear amoog residents that its very attractiveness may destroy it as more and more young professionals move in, driving up the rents, and the fashion-able restoration creeps back from the waterfront.

The contrasts and the tensions be-tween the North End people and the newcomers are sharp. When the redevelopment authority gave the local Knights of Columbus the sponsorship of housing development for the neighborhood elderly, the waterfront resi-dents objected, asserting that it would destroy brick warebouses that should be preserved.

Melee Over Demolition

One memorable Saturday morning a couple of years ago, the city sent in bulkdozers at 6 A.M. in hope of delivering a fait accompli. But the chief waterfront activist, out walking his dog, spotted them and sounded the alarm. The waterfront people raced out of their apartments and sat in the hulidozer scoops to stop the demolition. Seeing this, the Italian residents poured into the streets and fisticuffs ensued.

The new waterfront is the world of the well-to-do; the rents at Harbor Towers start around $400 for a studio apartment and go to $860 for a two-bedroom place. The sleekly renovated bare brickwall apartments in condominiums on the wharves are in the same price range. It is a world of the singles, the divorced and the "empty nesters," older couples whose children have grown up and moved out. In the 624 apartments of Harbor Towers, there are 15 children.

"The people who live here are mostly professional and financial people, law-yers, doctors, bankers," said Arthur Blackett, who developed the offices and apartments on Commercial Wharf. They're a little more than average successful, predominantly young, in their middle 30's to young 40's. A nifty gang of people."

Not Exactly Bohemian "There's still a mildly Bohemian element," he said, addiog thoughtfully, "Well, maybe Bohemian isn't exactly the right word." Plant stores, certain indicators that a neighborhood is going uphill, have taken root on the waterfront. Although there are teeming markets in the North

Eod, most of the waterfront people shop at a small convenience grocery store that delivers, stays open 24 hours and has a larger display of pet food and kitty litter than fresh vegetables. On weekeods, suburban residents drive in to stroll in the park and look at the boutiques and stores where furni-ture made from plastic is priced like platinum.

Sandy Villano, an ebullient former Redio City Music Hall Rockette who, with her husband, Joseph, manages Har-vard Towers, says: "Security is very important. People feel very safe bere." The huildings aod parking garage have round-the-clock Pinkerton guards. At night, the lawyers and bankers twirl their mustaches and head for the sin-clas have gles bars.

A Somewhat California Style

And yet, for all the recovation of historic huildings, there is a strange sense of placelessness about much of the new waterfront. It is as if there was a brick wall, hanging plant, univer-sal style, more California than New England, perhaps not surprising since three of the restaurant-bars that set the tone-the Winery, the Chart House and the Rusty Scupper—are branches of California chains. Their food is what ona might expect from the kind of place that prints its menu on a breadboard.

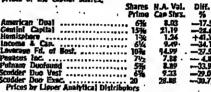

"This is real luxury living; I'd never go back to New York," said Mrs. Villa-no, looking at the view of the harbor no, looking at the view of the harbor and thinking of the swimming pool, the 28 boat elips at the door, the guards, the huilding newsletter and parties she runs and the classes for the tenants in Yoga, photography, "dancing and cooking." dancing and cooking.

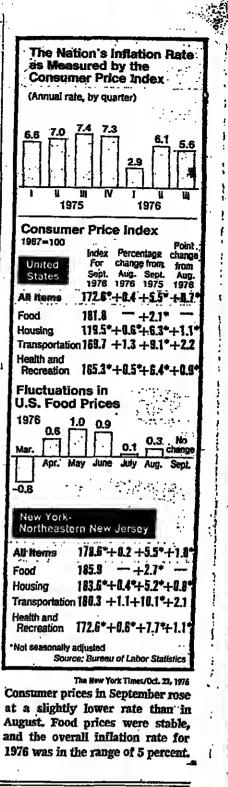

But Tim Anderson, the artchitect who helped start it all, is thinking of moving. "It's getting too rich for me down there," he said.

More than 60 of Jacques Barzun's friends and former students from the literary and intellectual world met at a University Club dinner last night for the cultural historian and Columbia University scholar. They presented him with a festschrift-a celebratory collection of 31 new writings inspired by his career. It includes an unfinished -resay that Lionel Trilling, Dr. Barzun's tlose friend and colleague, was working on at his death last November.

CTT Dr. Barzun, 68, is a literary adviser on thought and culture at the turn of the century. Hosts for the dinner were Wera Eberstadt, à sculptor who was a graduate student of Dr. Barzun's and his Columbia secretary for many years, and her husband, Walter A. Eberstadt. The festschrift will be published next month by Harper and Row as "From Parnassus: Essays in Honor of Jacques Barzun." It was edited by two history professors who are former Barzun students, Dora B. Weiner of Manhattan-ville College and William R. Keylor of Boston University.

Doctors in Calcutta said Palden Thondup Namgyal, former ruler of Sikkim, was still in critical condition but regaining consciousness four days after an overdose of barbiturates. A family member said that he had regained some of his reflexes and was beginning to react to light. Dr. William T. Foley of New York, an internist who had previously treated the former royal family in Sikkim, arrived in Calcutta yesterday. He was accompanied by the former king'a soo and daughter by his American second wife, who was Hope Cooke before ber 1963 marriage. She returned here with the children in 1973. Whether she would go to visit her husband was said yesterday to hinge on passport complications.

After 25 years with the State Department, Joseph J. Sisco was inaugu-rated Thursday as president of Washington's American University. Sitting in the front row was Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, for whom Mr. Sisco most recently was chief political and Middle East adviser. Calling his government, career "a privilege," the Chicago-born Mr. Sisco said, "I know, as the son of parents who did not get beyond grade school that advection beyond grade school, that education [made] it possible."

"Berlin without its Jews is not what it used to be-or what it should be." West Berlin's Mayor Klaus Schuetz told a Jerusalem audience yesterday. He dedicated a Ben-Gurion University dormitory, huilt with money raised in West Berlin, Recauting the Jews' "excitiog influence oo the city's intellectual and commercial life." Mayor Schuetz said: "We could do with a somewbat bigger community than the five or six thousand Jews living [in West Berlin] 'today."

"At 13,000 feet, you're roughly haif as smart as you are at sea level," reported Dr. Dee Crouch, a doctor with the American Bicentennial Expedition to Mount Everest, in Hong Kong yesterday. Dr. Crouch, who was on his way home to Boulder, Colo., said he was studying the effect of high altitude on the human brain. He said he had no proof that it can cause permanent brain damage but, he acknowledged, "The lore is that you don't come back from the mountain as smart as when you go up."

For Constance Davis, beating Saul Bellow in a Northwestern University short-story contest 40 years ago is "humbling" in retrospect. The Nobel Prize winner for literature placed only third in the 1936 competition, spon-sored by The Daily Northwestern. Mrs. Davis said she had done little creative. writing since, because she "couldn't stand to sit down to a typewriter" after a day's work at The Elyria (Ohio) Chronicle Telegram, where she is now women's news editor.

Mary Zimmer of Dearborn, Mich., who placed second in the college con-test, said she bad "made a living writing," mostly in advertising, but that creative career "never went very Neither of the women remembers far." heing impressed with Mr. Bellow at the time, they said yesterday. Mrs. Davis was awarded $S for first place. Like Mrs. Zimmer, Mr. Bellow was awarded a book for his short story, "The Hell It Can't." In December he will pick up a prize check for $160,000.

In hooor of his son, killed last March, at the age of 21, Charlie Byrd, the jazz guitarist, and his trio played a concert. last night at Washington's Sidwell Friends School. The concert, planned as an annual event, will benefit a scholarship fund at the school to honor Jeffrey Charles Byrd, who died in a car accident while an exchange studenc at the University of Madrid. He was a 1973 graduate of Sldwell Friends. His father lives in Annapolis, Md.

Last Saturday Noor Hussain, an 80year-old Pakistani woodcarver, landed at Washington's Dulles Airport with an ivory-inlaid rosewood table for the White House. And that was all. He had no money and no return ticket to his home in the Arab state of Duhai. He could speak no English and could not read or write.

Mr. Hussain had been trying to get one of his tables to the White House since 1973 and last received a letter, a year ago, saying, "The President does not wish to avail himself of your kind offer." He came anyway and has been taken in by the Pakistani Embassy. Yesterday a White House spokesman said the tiny, wizened woodcarver would present his table Tuesday. Presideot Ford will be away campaigning. LAURIE JOHNSTON

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22 (AP)—The McDon-nell Donglas Corporation filed a $25 millioo libel suit against the New York Times Company today in United States District Court here.

Over a Review of Two Books

"Also named as a defendant in the suit is:Robert Sherili, identified as a writer and editor whose review was published in The New York Times.

The suit says the reputation of McDonnell Dooglas was greatly damaged when Eke Times and Mr. Sherill "willfully, wantonly and maliciously" published a review of two hooks on Oct. 10.

The two books on Oct. 10. The two books were "Destination Dis-aster—From the Tri-Motor to the DC10: The Risk of Flying," and "The Last Nine Minutes—The Story of Flight 981." The first book deals with a history of the aerospace industry and the second deals with the 1974 crash of a DC10 near Paris which claimed 346 lives.

We know you Americans have quite an eye for advantageous situations. (Though we've forgiven that one 200 years ago, we haven't forgotten.) Well, be that as it may you're invited to take advantage of us again. And with the way our pound's been dropping, there's never with the way our pound's been dropping, there's never been a better time. So to stay at home now would be sheer folly. And this season is perfect for your visit, too. Our theatres are proudly showing their new pertorm-ances. (If you take the London Show Tour you'll see my new hit. And after the show, stay for a few moments and we'll have a little chat.) Our British spirits are as good as our fine British weather And British Aingray has some our fine British weather. And British Airways has some marvelous bargains for you to take advantage of as well.

Cheap-Cheap 5 Roundtrip from New York

That is the name of our lowest fare, you know. And now it's even better because of what we've subtracted from it. Time. If you have a two-week vacation you can travel as Cheap-Cheaply as those of you with three weeks or more. Once you needed 22 to 45 days; now you only need stay 14 to 45 days. But, to get it you must book and pay two months in advance, and if your plans change, there is a $50 cancellation fee. For you impulsive ones we still offer our low 22 to 45 day fare that requires no advance booking. And if you prefer to tour our country on a tour, we've plenty of those as well.

London Show Tour $439

Here's one you Americans have been taking advantage of for years. And with good reason. You get a round-trip, flight from New York. 7 days and 7 nights in your choice of 30 London hotels. 3 different theatre plans, 4 theatre tickets. And an Avis car for 3 days (your gas and mileage).
